

OWL LAFFS NEWTOWN

A WISE OWL

Are you completely over your holiday? If you're still weary, don't fret about it, it's the last vacation you'll have to go through this year. They get tougher to take as the years go on, don't they? Wait'll you get my age, you'll get smart and stay home.

There are more than 400 rubber parts in the average automobile, but it's still the pedestrian that bounces.

A nearby woman was denied a divorce on the claim that her husband stuck pins into a voodoo doll representing her. The husband said it was all in fun--besides it didn't work--Heck! I was just about to get me one of those dolls.

When a Marietta fellow was being prepared for surgery, the interne said: "When we operate, what will you have--gas, chloroform, or ether?" The fellow replied: "I believe in patronizing home industry give me one of those local anaesthetics. I've been hearing so much about."

If Labor Day comes can football be far behind?

A day, in my estimation was never more appropriately named. As I told you, I stay home. I guess it would be better to suffer, cause my wife can think up more labor for Labor Day than any ten guys. They say King Labor thought up Labor Day back in 1882, but I'll bet he got the idea from my spouse--You say she's not that old? Have you seen her lately?

This morning when I got on the Lancaster bus, a fellow from the east end got on at the same time, and the bus driver asked: "Did you get home all right last night?" The fellow answered: "Certainly, why do you ask?" And the driver explained: "Well, when you got up and gave your seat to the lady on the last bus, you and I were the only two people on the bus." --- Spirits? (Bottled, I mean)

Know what happens to ball players when their eyesight begins to fail? They make umpires out of 'em.

A little shaver in the grade school insists the principal is blind. He says his Dad gave him a note for the principal and twice while he was in his office the principal asked him where his hat was, and all the time it was in plain sight on his head.

A popular saying is, "A man does not eat hash in a restaurant because he doesn't know what's in it". Anyhow a Florin man went up to a Perry County farm for a long vacation, but he came back the first of the third week. When asked why he had returned so soon he explained: "Well, it's this way. The first week I was up there a pig died. We had pork all week. The second week a cow died. We had beef all week. The third week a farmhand died, and I came home!"

We could never understand why one of our most attractive young blondes always went to the Hershey dances with a young fellow who couldn't dance a step. Finally one of the crowd asked the reason and she replied: "He may not be able to dance, but he sure can intermission."

It's too bad my boss censors this column! I got a couple laffs plus some high class gossip that would make your ears sizzle. Aren't I a stinker, arousing your curiosity like that?

Let's not even mention the weather—it might change.

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

Boiled down — devoid of big or difficult words—our U. S. A. is in its present state of confusion, and on thin ice, for 2 main reasons. We been reading Freud and Marx when we should have been reading AESop.

Freud—and the lack of discipline—has given us horde of delinquents. Marx has filled the Bureau chairs there on the left bank of the Potomac, with socialists. And a socialist is just a freshman communist. And both these menaces came from the neglect of our AEsop. We been a sucker of the first water. We have listened to pink palaver about letting the Govt. cover the Nation with great and gigantic river-valley Authorities. Congress, spellbound, says, go ahead. We remain mum. Mum until income tax day when we don't find the Govt. elbowing us there at the tax window to pay its share. It pays no taxes—we dig a little deeper.

We stand by as the Govt. potato wagon backs up at the river edge and dumps its huge train loads to the fish. We buried one OPA and its agonies—congress now flirts with reviving the corpse.

But America can yet be salvaged. We must get our horse-sense out of the mothballs—also our AESop. That is you and me I am talking about.

Yours with the low down,
JIMMY

TOBACCO RUST IN COUNTY IS ON ITS WAY OUT

Fifty different lines of rust-resistant tobacco have been developed at the County Tobacco Experimental Station in its long-range fight to wipe out tobacco rust—long known as the scourge of tobacco growers. Several strains are being tested as cigar types. If they make high quality cigars, they will have proved themselves.
