F. F. A. News

The Lancaster County Vocational Agriculture Teachers announced at their last meeting that the annual Leadership Conference would be held in the high school at Maytown, October 25. The conference will be for the FFA officers in York Adams and Lancaster counties. Including guests, an estimated group of 200 people is expected to attend. Last year the conference was held in the York YMCA building. The program will begin with lunch in the high school cafeteria followed by a meeting in the gymnasium where the chapter officers will hear a series of talks on leadership. Later they will be broken down into smaller groups and sent to special rooms in the school where they will hear and participate in discussions dealing with the responsibilities of the various FFA officers. These discussions will be led by the instructors of agriculture from the three counties.

The evening program will include a banquet under the direction of Mrs. Robert D. Slauch, Vocational Home Economics Supervisor of Maytown, followed by a program to be announced later.

Mr. Thomas Malin, Supervisor of Vocational Education in York and Lancaster counties; Dr. J. W. Bingeman, Supervising Principal of East Donegal Twp. Schools; and Mr. Gene Love, Supervisor of Vocational Agriculture at Maytown will be in charge of the conference.

ED WAS EIGHTY AND IS STILL GOING STRONG

S. Edward Gable, president of the Lancaster Automobile Club, was the guest of honor recently at a testimonial dinner given on his eightieth birthday anniversary by the Board of Directors of the Club. Local and State officials, national and state representatives of organized motordom and many friends and associates in Lancaster County attended the dinner, held at Hotel Brunswick in Lancaster.

Mr. Gable has been president of the Lancaster Club since 1919 and under his leadership the organization has grown from several hundred members to more than 31,000. For ten years he served as president of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, AAA, and for many years has been a director of the American Automobile Association.

ITALIAN SPAGHETTI SUPPER

The St. Hilda's Guild of the St. Luke's Episcopal Church, will serve an Italian Spaghetti Supper in the Church basement on Saturday, September 30, from five to eight o'clock. Complete dinner will be spaghetti and meat balls, tossed salad, french bread, ice cream and coffee for one dollar.

SHORT STORY

Felix Retires

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

WHEN FELIX BRENDLINGER retired to private life he ceased to be a "figure" in Mayfield. If you took time to analyze the reason, the answer was simple. For 30 years Felix had left his home on Pleasant street at exactly 7:35 in the morning, walked a quarter mile to the railroad station, boarded the 7:48 train for Longview, and spent the day in that distant city at a desk in the insurance office of Booth, Gill and Dyer. Every evening he disembarked from the 5:52 train and traveled the quarter-mile to his Pleasant street home.

3 Minute Fiction

Mayfield citizens were used to the sight of Felix walking briskly to and from the railroad station. Sometimes some one would ask him to do an errand in Longview, and he'd always oblige. Frequently he would deliver choice bits of news to friends and acquaintances. Booth, Gill and Dyer had for their clients two large steamship lines, and Felix could tell when the boats arrived in port, or when they were delayed by storms and when important passengers were arriving from abroad.

There were a hundred and one things that Felix could and did do that achieved for him a certain recognition. After he retired, Felix ceased to be a figure. He wasn't an especially imaginative person, nor were his neighbors.

The neighbors knew unconsciously that Felix was no longer different from any of them. Felix knew it too. It troubled him. It hurt. It made him lonesome. It made him wonder. It threatened to develop in him an inferiority complex.

Felix tried hard to find pleasure in his retirement. He planted a garden and bought some chickens and occupied his time as much as he could. But it was a physical occupation, and this gave him plenty of opportunity to think. Eventually his thinking changed to brooding, and the brooding nourished the growing inferiority complex.

Felix's wife noticed the change. She tried to talk to him, to learn the source of his moodiness. But Felix couldn't explain it. He felt a little ashamed, and didn't want to talk.

Another month passed and Felix's wife began to think he was a case for the family doctor. Then one day a letter arrived from Booth, Gill and Dyer. They wanted to know if Felix would consider coming in for a few days to assist in straightening out some matters about which they considered him an expert.

"The idea," Felix's wife exclaimed. "Don't they know—but of course they don't—I'll write immediately and tell them how poorly you are!"

"You'll do no such thing!" Felix exclaimed, eyes gleaming. "I'm catching the 7:48 in the morning!"

THE JOB lasted three weeks. During that time Felix became a figure once more. People became used to him going back and forth to the train. Unconsciously they fell into the old routine of asking him to do errands and demanding choice bits of news. Felix was happy again. He beamed. He put on weight. He felt important. He was important.

"You'll do no such thing!" Felix exclaimed, his eyes gleaming. "I'm catching the 7:48 in the morning."

On the day that Felix finished up the special work, Mr. Gill approached him. "Felix, how about staying on with us awhile? You're not old enough to retire. We need you here."

"Need me?"

"As long as you'll stay. Oh, I realize that sooner or later we'll have to get along without your help—but none of us realized how important you were."

Felix's face glowed. "Thanks, Mr. Gill. You couldn't have said anything that would make me happier. But as far as staying with you is concerned—I'm afraid I'll have to turn down the offer. You see, I've got some chickens and a garden out home that need my attention. And—well—now I'll be able to retire with a clear conscience."
