Owner of a Farm

farm had dropped from $40,850 to $16,000. He added that the "Hazard of crossing the highway" to get from one part of the farm to another "would discourage me from considering it for purchase."

Abriam Erb, Erst Petersburg, owner of two farms near Swarr's, said in his estimation the value went down from $43,000 to $16,000. The case opened Monday, when a Common Pleas jury visited the Swarr land in an effort to determine damages.

Yesterday a jury awarded Swarr $15,000 damages.

Corn Cribs Ease Storage Problem Temporary Types Serve In Many Farm Areas

Much of the 1948 corn crop is still on the farm, filling many of the storage buildings which should be used for the 1949 crop.

Temporary or semi-permanent storage buildings are the answer if you lack space or money to build permanent cribs. These temporary-type cribs in some cases are good enough to meet requirements for government loans.

Here are some tips on building good, strong temporary cribs, as suggested by Successful Farming magazine:
1. Locate the crib on a well-drained site with exposure to prevailing winds.
2. Put a floor under the corn to keep it off the ground. A heavy, waterproof paper or roll roofing might be sufficient on high, well-drained soil. A strong, level floor, six to 12 inches above the ground, protects the corn against soil moisture, permits ventilation and discourages rodents.

Masonry blocks laid face down form a good foundation for the plank floor of a temporary crib. Rails, ties, logs or heavy timbers can be used instead of concrete blocks. If two-inch flooring is used, supports should not be more than four feet apart if the corn is to be 10 to 12 feet deep. If one-inch flooring is used, the supports should not be more than 24 inches apart. Floor planks should be placed one inch apart if you want a slatted floor for ventilation or artificial drying.

3. Make the crib sides vertical and build them so they will stay vertical. Be sure the sides are strong enough to withstand the pressure of the corn. Use rigid braces for the sidewalls and ends.
4. Make crib sides with at least 20 per cent of the wall area open for ventilation to speed up the corn drying process.
5. Put a roof over the corn that will withstand water and wind.

Earthworm Helpers

Earthworms thrive and prosper under good soil management. They will do a better soil conditioning job when fertilizer is added to the soil. And fertilizer is always more efficient when worms are present. U. S. department of agriculture research has demonstrated that in tests made at the Beltsville, Md., experiment station. These research men found that adding fertilizer boosted hay yields the equivalent of .52 tons per acre on soil containing worms. Without earthworms, the yield increase due to fertilizer averaged 28 tons.

The research men found other evidence that earthworms prosper under good soil management. They made an earthworm census in rotation plot experiments. They counted five times as many earthworms per acre in a soil cropped to a three-year rotation of row crops, small grains and hay, as they found in soil under constant row cropping.

Heel Flies Ofttimes Cause Much Discomfort to Cattle

If your cattle high-tail across the pasture as if they were running for their lives, there's a good chance that heel flies are causing the trouble. The same is often true when cattle spend their time standing in a pond or creek.

Dr. N. D. Levine, parasite specialist with the University of Illinois, says the heel fly doesn't bite. But it does scare the cows, causing them to lose weight.

the Nissley funeral home here, Tuesday afternoon with interment in the Mt. Tunnel cemetery at Elizabethtown.

Miss Irene F. Shatto
Miss Irene F. Shatto, seventy-seven, formerly of this borough, died at 10 a.m. Monday at the Lancaster County Home after an illness of a year. She was born at New Germantown, Perry County, a daughter of the late John and Susan Smith Shatto, and was a member of the Church of God. One sister, Mrs. Clara Ashwell, Harrisburg, and a number of nieces and nephews survive.

The funeral was held this Wednesday afternoon from the Nissley funeral home on East Main Street, with interment in the Ebenezer Cemetery.
