Electronic Purifier Kills Offensive Odors

Farmers Using Purifier To Clear Up Farm Odors

The old problem of odors on a farm, caused by live stock or poultry, by dampness or rustiness, can now be solved. And for less than a half cent a day.

A powerful air purifier, called Air-Tron, uses ozone, nature's own "air freshener" to create outdoor freshness in foul-smelling places by killing odor-producing bacteria in the air and on the surfaces. Farmers in many areas are reported taking advantage of the purifier and are turning their farms into more pleasant places in which to live and work.

The Air-Tron is a compact unit which generates short wave ultraviolet rays destroying unpleasant odors electronically. It is produced by Roy C. Stove and Company of Chicago.

A single-lamp unit provides air freshening protection for an area up to 600 cubic feet—the size of the average milk house. For areas up to 1,200 cubic feet, the double lamp has been developed.
