Co. Farm Bureau Co-op. Met Here Last Thursday

The supply of farm labor in Lancaster county is short and the situation threatens to become worse, County Agent Maxwell M. Smith told the 16th annual meeting of the Lancaster County Farm Bureau Cooperative held here last Thursday.

The draft and war work in industry are the chief factors promising a further drain on the supply, Smith said.

Smith reported that the Lancaster County Agricultural Council, a federation of local farm agencies, would like to sit down with local draft boards and work out a realistic policy for the deferment of bona fide farmers.

Several hundred persons attended the all-day meeting held at Mount Joy high school. Mark S. Hess, Lancaster R6, Co-op president, was in charge.

Smith also called on county farmers to prepare for the war emergencies by (1) ordering their supplies and fertilizer early; (2) aims for "more efficient farming methods"; (3) stress the production of wool, which is a scarce commodity; and cull bad animals out of their flocks.

These directors were elected: Elias Z. Musser, Mount Joy R1; Walter Witwer, Gordonville R1; Elvin Hess of Strasburg R1; and J. Everett Kreider, Quarryville.
