EDITORIAL

Six years ago the shooting stopped in Europe. During World War II Russia got $10,000,000,000 in Lend Lease Aid from the United States. Now after years of prodding and endless arguments we are willing to drop the ten billion and settle for the $800 million.

But Russia wants to settle for a measly $240,000,000, and while all this discussion was going on Russia "sawed the pants off our Uncle Sammy to the extent of many billions of dollars in preparedness."

Ain't we just the biggest bunch of suckers that ever lived?

It has been learned from records recently released that during our last Prohibition era there were at least 36,000 speakeasies in New York City alone.

Another illustration of what a bunch of suckers the American people prove to be. The Government lost all the tax money derived from the sale of liquor, those who wanted it still had their booze, while the authorities had a big headache trying to seek means of raising an amount to equal the taxes they lost.

Of course you haven't heard much about Prohibition since then. It's a $84 problem trying to deprive the average American citizen of anything he really wants.

Early this week we made a note to explode the next time somebody suggested another special course in the public schools to correct some juvenile delinquency. We had to wait just two days.

To offset crime and delinquency, a reader proposed courses on behavior, how to get along with one another, simple ethics, fair play, emotional control, and a philosophy based on the golden rule.

One of our readers wants a course to teach the young how to spend money intelligently because he says, so many people find themselves no better off at $80 a week than they were at $30.

It is nonsense to expect so much from the schools. Right now the schools are so cluttered with special courses that the students are graduated without adequate knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic. Half of them can't read, write, or speak the language properly. They can't spell simple words or handle ordinary figures.

What might be taught in special courses should be an incidental by-product of established and essential courses. Self-discipline, fair play, honesty, industriousness, and emotional control are not acquired from special study but from daily living.

Let parents assume some of the burden of training their children. They have the help of private and public institutions such as the Y. M. C. A., the social settlements, the churches, the summer camps, and the public playgrounds. It is unfair to blame the schools for everything, or ask them to do what others, including parents, have plainly failed to do.

It certainly looks as if coal is here to stay, despite the existence of other fuels with which it must compete.

During the twelve months which ended last February 28, the soft coal industry produced and shipped nearly 500,000,000 tons, including a re-stocking of depleted storage piles. And it is now predicted that production for consumption during the present calendar year will be at about the same high rate.

All the major consumers of coal are showing an increasing appetite including the electric utilities and the railroad. More coal is being used by steel and by general industry. More is being exported.

And domestic use for home heating is running at an annual rate of nearly 90,000,000 tons.

This speaks well for the vigor and progressiveness of the coal industry. Like all free enterprise, it has faced and met tough competition. It has held down costs by immensely improving production methods—and this has also made a great contribution to safety in the mines, and to miners' wages and working conditions. It has carried on a very extensive research program, which has given users a better, clearer and more adaptable product. It's purpose is to improve coal's service to all types of consumers—which is always an industry's purpose in a competitive economy.

Last, but certainly not least, coal is one of the essential mainstays of our rearmament effort. It is a weapon in war, and a tool in peace.

A REAL LUXURY
Someone once said that smoking in bed is a luxury which should be pursued only by people who can afford to build new homes every so often.

It could be added that it is also a good practice for those who are eager to see what the next world is like soon as possible. It has been the cause not only of thousands of home fires, but of disasters in hotels which have resulted in a ghastly toll of death and injury.

Moreover, this source of fire is typical of the fact that the great majority of fires are completely unnecessary. Certainly, even the chain-smoker can put out his final cigarette before he turns in for the night. And even the most indolent householder can make his home safe from fire in many other ways without overstraining his muscles. It doesn't take much effort to see that flammable junk is properly disposed of, rather than being stored in basements and closets where it is a constant invitation to fire. It's no great task to periodically check up on exposed electric cords and replace those which are frayed. And it's easy to call the repair shop and have someone who knows his business make a routine inspection of furnaces and other heating appliances before they are subjected to the heavy cold-weather load.

If these things alone are done, the risk of fire in most homes will be tremendously reduced. And the other major causes of fire are equally simple to detect and correct. No one can do it for you. It's your job—just as it's your life and property that's at stake.
