EDITORIAL

Governor John Fine urges support for Swim for Health week. We are with you one hundred percent John. We not only swim for health Governor—we're always in the swim in an effort to keep our heads above water in this present day business world.

We want to commend George Brown's son Bennie for his determined effort in winning the Lancaster City-County Tennis Tournament championship for Junior Boys for the second successive year. It was a complete and unquestionable victory 1-6, 6-2, 6-3.

In any kind of competition, a guy who can go out there and win when the pressure is on, certainly deserves a lot of credit. Benny proved himself a real Hogan in his effort and is greatly admired by his many friends and competitors not only in tennis but baseball, soccer, and basketball as well.

But then why shouldn't a lad make good with a tutor like his Dad?

The Playgrounds here and at Florin have opened for the season. They are sponsored by people who really know the vast amount of good which can be attained by the boys and girls during the Summer months.

Then too, one must not forget the comfort and satisfaction parents get from knowing that their children are well cared for, attaining the fresh air, exercise and experience required to develop men and women of tomorrow.

Under the capable tutelage of their instructors, all are greatly benefitted by these Summer schools.

NEVER - ENDING SERVICE
Fire insurance serves this country in two vitally important ways.

It's primary function is to provide business, agriculture and the homeowner with an absolutely indispensable buffer against possible financial disaster. It has done this with great efficiency and with remarkable economy. For example, despite the tremendous rises in costs and prices that have occurred since 1949, the bill for $1,000 worth of fire insurance on an average home in a typical location in the United States is about the same as in that year.

Fire insurance's second service is of direct benefit to everyone, whether he owns a piece of property and a policy or not. The industry carries on comprehensive, day-in-and-day-out fire prevention work, with emphasis on fire safety, better methods of construction, safer ways of working, and more efficient techniques for fighting fire once it starts. Each year a Fire Prevention Week, proclaimed by the President of the United States, sees this job reach its climax.

Organized fire prevention has reduced the risk of fire everywhere. It has saved uncounted lives and huge sums of money. One of its greatest late achievements has been the inspection, by qualified engineers, of our American hospitals and the preparation of reports showing where dangers exist and how they may be eliminated. It has been especially active in the field of rural fire prevention. Our fire loss is still inexcusably high—but it would be far higher were it not for this never-ending work.

Fire insurance is one of those quiet enterprises which provides services we could not do without.

The nation has been given a series of top-flight stories lately—including the Fulbright investigation of shenanigans in the RFC, the Kefauver investigations of big-time gambling with its resulting municipal corruption, the sentence-ing to death of two Americans who acted as A-bomb informants for the Russians, and the dismissal of General MacArthur and his dramatic return home to defend his position and policies. Such events as these naturally dominate the headlines. But, regardless of the big stories, the American people and their government must keep on dealing with the everyday problems of living in today's complex and difficult world.

Among these problems, inflation still holds a top place. Some people think the present controls are doing as well as can be expected, some think them almost a complete flop. But just about everyone must now realize that prices are not going to return to long-ago levels, that the probabilities are that they will continue to rise, and that the great American dollar isn't what she used to be.

Today's dollar, according to a U. S. News and World Report account, has lost two-thirds of its worth since 1900 is still slipping. It has lost six cents of its value in the last year alone. To quote the magazine directly, "There is more money in relation to the volume of goods than there ever was. That is what is making money less valuable."

We have all felt the effect of this personally. The Wall Street Journal recently ran a series of feature stories, dealing with current financial experiences of actual families in widely varying income brackets. The articles went into full detail as to how much money came in and how it was spent—food, rents and mortgages, clothing, recreation, etc. The incomes ranged from around $50 a week for an industrial worker, to $35,000 a year for an executive. In every case, the families were finding the sledding tough. None were saving anything to speak of, some were drawing on past savings, some were slipping deeper into debt. Their incomes had gone up over recent years—but higher living costs and heavier taxes had more than offset their gain.

The U. S. News article pointed to the fact that it is next to impossible to establish a sizeable estate now—living costs, income taxes, and finally death taxes are responsible for that. And money, even as it buys less, will bring in less return when it is invested. In 1900 an accumulation of $25,000 would return $1500 when safely invested, and that $1500 would go a long way. Today a safely invested estate brings in only $750 a year, and the $750 buys little.

These are facts. As for proposed cures, it would take a thick book to adequately outline them. But the facts alone indicate why more and more people are taking a real interest in inflation and urging that something effective be done about it. And when it comes to that, the great bulk of economists are convinced that the first step lies in drastic changes in the spending, credit and taxing policies of the central government.

CHILDREN NEED THE IRON IN TASTY MOLASSES

All of us need iron—a certain amount each day in our diets. Without enough iron, the body suffers from "nutritional anemia"—early signs of which are pale-ness, a listless run-down feeling.

The easiest way to get this iron is from the food you eat. But you should pick out food rich in "available" iron, that is the kind absorbed and used by the body. One of the cheapest and best food sources of available iron is New Orleans molasses. Just 3 table-spoons a day gives you about 1/3 of the iron needed. It's so easy to include this amount in your menu. Eat molasses on cereal; stir it into the luncheon glass of milk; serve home-made gingerbread for supper. Try it as the sweetening in brown Betties, cobblers and bread puddings, or in the recipe below.

Molasses Sundae: Spoon 2 table-spoons New Orleans molasses over each serving of vanilla or chocolate ice cream. Top with marsh-mallow fluff.

Walter Berkheiser, fifty, Elizabethtown, was arrested for being implicated in the sale of lottery tickets.

Customers' Corner

What do you consider good service in a food store? Do you get it at your A&P?

Of course, we expect all our employees to be friendly and courteous. But we train our employees to be prompt, efficient, helpful and accurate as well.

Good service also requires that the store itself be clean, well stocked and well operated.

Any time your A&P doesn't measure up to these yardsticks of good service, our loyal employees want to know about it. Please write:
