180 MILLION PAIRS

PHILADELPHIA—Yvonne Missbach tries on a modern pair of ready-to-wear reading glasses while she examines ovalized spectacles worn in 1900. The 1900 model glasses are from the Pennsylvania Optical company's collection, which also includes "specs" made in the Gay Nineties. More than 180 million pairs of ready-to-wear reading glasses have been made by the company and sold in this and many foreign countries since the turn of the century. These glasses, sold in variety and dime stores without a prescription, are made to help middle age persons see more clearly and do close work. They will not help Yvonne because she is too young to need them, but doctors say wearing them will not harm her eyes.

WHO'S Crippled?

SUCCESS STORY OF THE MONTH

William Maund

In spite of being crippled since he was nine months old, William Maund, 41, of Philadelphia, hasn't let his physical handicap stand in his way of leading a happy, useful life. He is successfully serving as chief accountant and controller of the Philadelphia Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

Because of his determination to obtain a good education and become a contributing and productive member of society, the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, the Easter Seal Agency, has conferred on Maund the "Who's Crippled?" citation through its state affiliate, the Pennsylvania Society for Crippled Children and Adults. This award was officially presented to him at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Society in Harrisburg.

Maund contracted infantile paralysis when he was nine months old, and today he wears long leg braces and uses crutches. Until he was 12 years old, his family obtained the finest medical care and treatment for him. Then, one of the many specialists who examined the youth advised the family that they should accept their son's paralysis and seek instead a sound education for his future happiness.

Following this advice, his parents successfully guided him through grammar and high school. When the roads were too icy for the school bus to pick him up, the youth's mother would press into service the first reputable driver passing the house.

After graduating from high school, Maund received a senatorial scholarship which enabled him to graduate from Temple University with a bachelor of science degree in accounting. His graduation coincided with the depression, and he then realized he needed a better than average education in order to get a job. His mother, who was working, helped finance her son through Columbia University where he received a master's degree in accounting.

Although he was armed with a good education, Maund at first had difficulty in obtaining a job. Finally, he secured a position with the Shut-In Society in Philadelphia as bookkeeper, and the Philadelphia Society for Crippled Children and Adults hired him on a part time basis to teach bookkeeping to its secretarial classes.

In 1943 Maund left to head up the accounting department of a Philadelphia munitions firm, and has held various responsible positions in industry. In 1950 he returned to the Philadelphia Society to serve as comptroller on a full time basis.

As a hobby, Maund enjoys music and often spends an evening playing the violin in the Upper Darby and Roxboro Symphony Orchestras. Brought up in an atmosphere of love, courage and security, he reflects these attributes in his daily living. He is married, owns his own home, drives his own car and is a respected member of his community.

A Fine Program Is Planned For Auto Club Picnic

Plans for the annual picnic of the Lancaster Automobile Club at Hershey Park on Thursday, July 26, have been announced by the committee in charge. The program includes morning and afternoon concerts by the Pottstown band, a twilight concert by the Litz High School band, a baseball game between Millersville and New Holland, of the City-County League, a safety demonstration by State Police trained dogs, a sensational aerial trapeze act, musical clowns, and a big free vaudeville show at night.

For children 12 years and younger there will be free rides, free ice cream and toys. Several hundred cash prizes will be awarded members who have secured new on picnic day. In addition there will be a special prize drawing for members who have secured new members during the past year.

According to S. Edward Gable, Club president, the 1951 picnic program will be the best ever staged by the Club. The picnic is open to the public and all are cordially invited.

The committee in charge of arrangements is as follows: Baseball, Alger H. Shirik and H. C. Kreisler; speakers and entertainment, S. Edward Gable; prizes and children's tickets, H. C. Kreisler, Dean Gable and A. H. Pontz; music, F. L. Spence; parking, J. H. Nissley; first aid, Edgar G. Hess; publicity, Dean Gable.
