EDITORIAL

Too many people of today expect miracles. Some even think you can put a setting of eggs under the old hen in the evening and have broilers for breakfast.

The more government controls, the less freedom for the people of the nation. About the only people who benefit by controls are those who are added to the Federal payroll.

Having removed ourselves from participation in government we look upon it as a wealthy old uncle whom it would seem we wish to die that we may inherit mythical benefits. We storm the ramparts of our economy to demand that which will impoverish us. Americanism is a beautiful and a workable thought but it takes people to make it work and to make it beautiful. The same people can destroy it through selfishness.

It is agreeable to observe at this late date—34 years after the tragic establishment of Communism in Russia—that the United States Government is fully and amply clothed with constitutional powers to protect itself at all times . . . against the threat of imported anarchy and revolution. The power of the government to defend itself—and the people—against violence and terrorism in no way conflicts with the protections of free speech and free press guaranteed to law-abiding citizens under the Bill of Rights.

AS MODERN AS TODAY
A symbol of modern coal mining is now under construction in a Western state. In this new mine coal will be produced, loaded and transported by the ingenious machines that have supplanted the shovels, picks and mules of the old days. Above ground, ready to receive the coal at the surface, will be preparation plants to screen, size, wash and grade the product before it is marketed.
If this particular mine were unique, it would be of small significance. What makes it important is that it is typical of the modern coal industry. In the past five years, more than 200 bituminous mines that have a daily capacity of 500 tons or greater have been opened in the United States. These mines are mechanized in every phase of operation. And the older mines, as well, have been rapidly installing the most modern machines and equipment.

Here is why the American coal mines are so tremendously superior in productive capacity to those of the rest of the world—and why the American miner is paid a wage that would seem absolutely unbelievable to his counterpart in the other coal-producing countries. Remarkable machines, rather than human muscles, do the bulk of the work.

Our coal industry has taken the heavy demands of the defense program in stride. It is meeting every civilian demand, and it is exporting millions of tons of coal this year. Coal is an old fuel—but industry's methods of producing and handling it are as modern as today.

SIMPLE MATTER
A good many people, it seems, do not know how to go about buying stock in American enterprise, or where to turn for advice.
Actually, this is a simple matter. For example, the member firms of such institutions as the New York Stock Exchange have offices in all of the big cities and many smaller communities. They are always glad to talk over a prospective investor's problems and desires and to offer advice based on long experience. They know which stocks have had the best dividend records, and which hold the best prospects for the future. Their aid can be had by anyone for the asking, and there's no charge!

If and when the potential investor decides to buy stock, whether the purchase involves a few shares or many, the broker will execute the order and take care of all the details. The charge for this runs from a fraction of one per cent to six per cent of the purchase price, depending on the size of the order. The average around one per cent.

That's all there is to the mechanics of buying stocks. It's simplicity is attested by the fact that 15,000,000 people now own shares in American corporate enterprise, and the number is growing at a healthy rate. Few of these people are big-time capitalists or professional speculators. Most of them are typical citizens, with moderate incomes who put part of their savings into the shares of businesses in which they have faith.

The people who own stocks, regardless of the size of their holdings, are partners in the enterprise which makes this country tick and on which its future depends.

IT'S ABOUT TIME

A move to amend the constitution to limit the amount of tax money the federal government can collect and keep is under way in the states. Twenty states have already passed resolutions while approval of thirty-two is needed.

It's about time something is done to limit the total of taxes U. S. can collect. Our national debt keeps increasing by leaps and bounds and it's only common sense that this cannot continue indefinitely.

According to the present administration's theory, the sky is the limit. There must be an end to everything and today it's a $64 question—Just How Long Can We Keep Going at the Present Pace?

AVOID THE CRACK-UP

In the view of Sen. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, it is clear that deficit spending cannot be contemplated even for the current defense program, unless we are willing to invite the crack-up of the American system.

This is one way of saying that the defense program, along with all other government activities, must be placed on the pay-as-we-go basis. However, at the present time—and in spite of tremendously heavy taxes on individuals and enterprise—government income is not sufficient to meet the outgo.

One solution is constantly offered by Administration spokesmen. It is to jack up taxes even higher, and so balance the budget at some astronomical figure. But that would be one of the surest ways to invite the crack-up of the American system. Even now, taxes, direct and indirect, are one of the biggest items of expense to the average American family—and to families whose incomes are substantially above the average, they are the biggest item by far. Corporation taxes are so high as to make it extremely difficult to carry on needed replacement and improvement programs. They fall with particular weight on the relatively small business, by blocking its growth. They are undermining incentive and destroying ambition—why should a man work to his utmost when, if he succeeds, the government will take most of what he earns?

What, then, is the answer? There is only one—and that is the sharpest possible cut in government spending to the point where the budget can be balanced without further tax boosts. Authority after authority has shown how that can be done without harming the defense program in any way. It must be done it that crack-up of the American system which Senator O'Mahoney fears is to be avoided.

CAPT. GEPHART ADVISES GERMAN ON FISH STOCKING

Capt. Joan W. Gephart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah H. Gephart, of this town, is now serving at the European Command Ordnance School, Eschwege, Germany, advising Germans in restocking their streams with fish.

The school recently donated a special fund to the Eschwege Fishing Club to assist in the restocking of streams in that area.

With him in Germany are his wife, the former Kathryn C. Bevis, of Quincy, Fla., and their three children.

Everybody in this locality reads The Bulletin—that's why its advertisers get such excellent results.
