

Sixth Longest Bridge Ends Delaware River Bottleneck

Opening August 16 of the $44-million Delaware Memorial Bridge, sixth longest span in the world, ends one of the worst ferry bottlenecks on eastern seaboard's north-south traffic routes. The new span bridges a mile of water with towers rising 437 feet to support a four-lane roadway high above the largest ocean-going vessels. Engineers and workmen of U. S. Steel's American Bridge Company planned and labored a year-and-a-half to erect the mighty structure using 40,000 tons of steel to replace the Newcastle Ferry shown here at the height of a Sunday traffic snarl. Opening ceremonies, with governors of Delaware and New Jersey attending, dedicate the bridge to World War II dead of the two states.
