Stock Available In Clinton and Potter County Gas Wells

The Pamaco Gas and Oil Company, Inc. of Renovo, Lock Haven and Germania, Pa., is continuing the stock issue for its Potter and Clinton County operations. Two wells are now being drilled on Company property at North Bend near Renovo, Pa., within a few hundred feet of the new famous Gushikoff producing well.

The Germania well will be drilling at once. Mr. Clyde Williams, the contractor who has brought in three producing wells, has this contract. This assures the company of a quick and efficient operation.

Drilling on the Thompson estate on the Summerson Mountain acreage and the Driftwood Area will be in progress in the near future.

The Company has also acquired 2830 acres in the long proven gas and oil area of Ohio. Expect to drill on this acreage about November.

Stock may be purchased or information concerning gas operations can be secured by contacting the Pamaco Gas and Oil Company at any of the above locations or by phone or letter to Mr. John R. Brown, Germania, Pa.

In addition to her seven attendants, who represented schools and 4-H clubs from the Mount Joy area, Miss Ginder was also attended by Susann Huttenstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Huttenstein, of Manheim R2; and Russel Meredith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Meredith, Mount Joy R1.

Indian Theme

Thursday evening's program was arranged by members of the Farm Women's Society No. 8 and was carried out in an Indian theme.

In addition to the crowning of the queen, the program included Indian folklore portrayed by local Boy Scouts, a solo "Indian Love Call" by Norma Shenk, Rheems; an Indian song and dance by students of the Washington elementary school, Rheems, who also wore Indian songs by the Girl Scouts and a quartet of the Mt. Joy Lions Club, and selections by a trombone trio from Elizabethtown College.

Miss Ginder's attendants include Jeanne Miller, East Petersburg; Janet Bricker, Elizabethtown R2; Janet Hummel, Marietta; Mary Ann Spangler, Mount Joy; Mary Weidman, Manheim R1; Kay Warfel, Mt. Joy R1; and Carolyn Graybill, Litzitz R2.

FRIDAY

CORN HUSKING

Joe Hess, twenty-three-year old farmer, of Mount Joy R1, is the 1951 champion corn husker of Lancaster County. His net score, after penalties for gleanings and husks, was 30.98 bushels of ear corn.

Joe won decisively, taking the crown from Lewis Bixler, Mt. Joy R1, who won the title in 1949 and successfully defending it in 1950 but was out husked by 6.7 bushels in the 15th annual county-wide contest held Friday afternoon at the Musser Leghorn Farm, near Mount Joy.

Runner-up was John Weidman, Mount Joy R1, who husked more ears than the new champ but suffered heavier penalties. His net score being 24.63 bushels. Bixler, former champion, was only one-half bushel behind, placing third in the contest with 24.23 bushels.

The contest held in connection with the Community Exhibit drew 1,100 spectators, a record crowd for five years, according to D. C. Witmer, in charge of parking.

Seventeen showed up for the elimination trials held in the morning, narrowing the field of contestants to 12 men for the gruelling 80 minute finals in the afternoon. It was "tough" husking, officials said, due to the recent rain.

Fans flew through the air with the greatest of ease, crashing against the bang boards of the wagons, but husks clung to the ears and drew heavy penalties.

Hess, who topped the field, husked 2,410 pounds of corn in all, but was penalized for 12 pounds of gleanings and 10.5 ounces of husks. His net score of 2,169.1 pounds figured at the rate of 70 pounds to the bushel, gave him the winning score of 30.98 bushels.

Weidman, runner-up, husked 2,459 pounds, but suffered deductions for 41 pounds of gleanings and 16 ounces of husks, leaving a net of 1,724.5 pounds.

Bixler, in third place, husked 2,120 pounds, had 27 pounds of gleanings and 13 ounces of husks as penalties, meaning a net score of 1,770 pounds of corn.

Pennsylvania Week
OCTOBER 15th to 21st, 1951

PENNSYLVANIA'S RELIGIOUS TRADITION

The first law ever enacted in Pennsylvania was a guarantee of religious freedom. This was an idea new to the world in the seventeenth century, a principle for which William Penn had endured prison in England. When he met with the General Assembly of his infant province at Chester on December 5, 1682, the first act he proposed declared that every man should have the right to worship God as he saw fit. Without a single dissenting vote, the Assembly laid down this law as the cornerstone on which Pennsylvania should be founded.

Christianity had been introduced into the State by the Swedes, who established the Swedish Lutheran Church on Tinicum Island in 1643. The Swedes in 1700 built Gloria Dei in Philadelphia, the oldest church still standing in Pennsylvania. The Quakers also had brought their religion here before the creation of the province, holding their first meeting at Upland (now Chester) in 1675.

The coming of the Scotch-Irish and the Pennsylvania Germans made the State the headquarters of several other religions. The Scotch-Irish brought with them their Presbyteranism, which spread rapidly after the first congregation was organized in Philadelphia in 1698. Although the Presbyterians moved up to the South and West, Pennsylvania remained their stronghold. Western Pennsylvania is still one of the centers of this great faith.

The Pennsylvania Germans belonged largely to the Lutheran and Reformed churches. The oldest German Lutheran church in the United States was organized at New Hanover in 1703, but the denomination did not really begin to grow until the arrival of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg in 1742. The Lutherans continued to expand until they became the largest of the Protestant denominations in the State. The first Reformed churches in Pennsylvania were Dutch Reformed, established in Bucks and Montgomery counties in 1710, but the history of the German Reformed church did not begin until October 15, 1725, when John Philip Boehm organized the Falckner's Swamp Church. Michael Schlatter, who arrived in Philadelphia from Switzerland on September 6, 1746, was responsible for the growth of the denomination.

Among the Pennsylvania Germans there were also several smaller sects. The Mennonites arrived as early as 1693, although their first church was not built until 1708 in Germantown. The Amish began coming in 1714, establishing their first church in Berks County in 1736. The German Baptist Brethren, popularly known as the "Dunkards", organized their first congregation in Germantown on December 25, 1723. The Schwenkfelders were another small religious group, who settled in Montgomery County in 1734. The Moravians established themselves at Bethlehem and Nazareth in 1740.

As the home of religious freedom, Pennsylvania has also been the birthplace of a number of religions. One of the first was the Seventh-Day Baptists, founded by Conrad Beissel in 1729 when he withdrew from the German Baptist Church to establish Ephrata Cloister. The United Brethren Church was organized in Lancaster County by Philip William Otterbein and Martin Boehm. The Evangelical Church was born in Pennsylvania through the efforts of Jacob Albright. The Disciples of Christ, founded by Alexander Campbell, organized their first church at Brush Run, in Washington County, on May 4, 1811. The Church of Latter-Day Saints (Mormons) also had beginnings in Pennsylvania.

The other principal Protestant denominations are not so distinctively Pennsylvanian. Episcopalian services were being held in Philadelphia by 1695. The first Methodist church in Pennsylvania was St. George's erected in Philadelphia in 1769, the oldest Methodist building in America. Although the first Baptist church was established in Bucks County in 1684, the denomination did not begin to grow rapidly in Pennsylvania until the middle of the nineteenth century. The Congregational Church was brought into the State by the New England settlers in the Wyoming Valley.

The first Catholic congregation in the State was organized in Philadelphia in 1720 by Father Joseph Groaton, and the first chapel was erected thirteen years later. Another early Catholic center was the Conewago in Adams County, where the oldest Catholic chapel in continuous use in the eastern United States still stands.

The first Jewish congregation was organized at Lancaster in 1776, followed by two Philadelphia congregations established in 1780 and 1782. In the western part of the State the first Jewish congregation was organized at Pittsburgh in 1846.

Pennsylvania now shelters more than 100 different religious groups, all of them protected by that freedom of conscience which was first proclaimed to the world on December 5, 1682. Pennsylvania's church membership is in excess of five millions.
