Perfect Day

By Sallydale Wimbrow

3 Minute Fiction

EARLY FALL bristled the air. The lawn surrounding the little church was caked with brown fallen leaves and in the sky, a bright sun darted behind a cloud.
"Such a perfect day!" Nell thought. "Everything is on its good behavior for Steve and Mary."
She folded her hands in her lap and relaxed in her seat. The organist softly began playing the pre-wedding melody. An unexpected tear started down Nell's cheek.
"That's right," she told herself. "Go ahead and cry. Make a fool of yourself and howl like a baby. Forget about your plan to seem calm."
"The church looks lovely. Isn't it beautiful?" someone whispered. "Everything is so perfect."
"Yes" Nell thought. "Lovely, the white flowers, the fern, everything perfect. I mustn't be sad. I should be happy for Steve, for this is what he wants. It seems so sudden though... he getting married. Just yesterday he was only a boy interested in boats, automobile engines, camping out in the woods for weekends. Is he ready for a wife, a family? Oh, my Steve, I love you. But I would not hold you back. Not if this is your happiness. You have chosen Mary and she is lovely. I would not fight to keep you for myself, though I can't imagine what my life will be now, without you."

Mary was indeed a vision.

The opening strains of the wedding march sounded. People stood. There was the rustle of new dresses, the sound of feet shuffling on the floor. Nell felt stiff. She pulled herself up, put one hand on the back of the pew before her. There was Steve, standing by the altar, his face slightly flushed, looking toward the back of the church. His eyes were bright waiting for Mary. Nell remembered seeing that brightness in his eyes so many times before. She remembered how she had watched him often when he was only a small boy, playing with skates and toy pistols. As he grew, so did her love for him.
"Only yesterday" Nell thought "You were mine. Now you will never be mine again. Mary will hear your questions, solve your problems, be there when you need help. She is your life now. I have given you all I have to give. I only hope you will remember me, Steve, remember me with a smile. I will always love you and cherish the happiness you gave to me."

Paul Fitzkee will play the role of Gabriel. Other characters will be portrayed by Gerald Berrier, Lorraine Darenkamp, Asher Neiss, Lorretta Kline, Shirley Hawthorne, Robert Schneider, Georgann Shatto, Robert Sher, Mary Ann Spangler, Robert Williams and Claudette Zeller.

MARY was coming down the aisle. She seemed surrounded by a faint glow. Nell trembled slightly at the sight of the admiring congregation. Mary was indeed a vision. By the altar, Steve was leaning forward, tense. There was that eager expression on his face that Nell remembered so well.
"The picnic" she thought. "You took me by the river for a picnic—and we carried your old portable phonograph. You played your favorite records—laughed at me trying to learn about jive. That eager alive look you have now. We were so happy Steve. You kissed my cheek and told me I was your girl—There would never be another girl for you. That's what you said, Steve—remember?"
Now the couple stood together, facing the altar. Nell heard the words that tied Steve and Mary together for a lifetime, unable to control a soft sob. "Mary, Mary—make him happy. It's up to you now."
Then it was over. The organ sounded again and Nell watched the couple turn, start for the door, laughing. Steve clasped Mary's hand and they brushed by Nell. "He doesn't even see me" Nell thought "He didn't even look."
Outside a photographer was taking pictures.
Nell lifted her chin, tried a bright smile. She walked up to Steve who was standing alone while Mary posed for her picture.
"Darling" she whispered "It was perfect. I am so happy."
He leaned and kissed her. "Thank you, Sweetheart" he said. Then his arm stole about her waist and he hugged her.
"I'm rather happy myself" he said and then he looked deep in her eyes.

Corn Shocks Used to Be Sign of Fall; Now Driers Replacing Them

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau
Give an artist a rural scene to paint and—if it's fall—chances are that he'll work in corn shocks someplace in the picture. They look like open country. And, a few years ago, were typical of harvest time on the farm.
But things have happened to change the picture. An increasing amount of corn is being picked and dried mechanically these days. This development is moving corn shocks out of their customary fall role. For shocks used to be one of the farmer's chief methods for drying corn.
Now fans are taking over this important drying chore. Operated by motors of 5 horsepower or larger, fans deliver an air volume of 5 to 10 cubic feet per minute per bushel. Corn may be dried satisfactorily without supplementary heat if the temperature is 60 degrees or above and the relative humidity 65% or below.
When heat is needed, there are crop driers available which can handle this job. Such units have built-in heaters and motor-driven fans, as well as thermostats and other controls to keep the temperature and air flow at correct drying levels.
Both single and double cribs may be used for drying, provided a few recommendations are followed and minor alterations made. First, install the fan at the entrance of the crib and seal off all space around the fan. In double cribs, seal up the other doorway as well. Tight-sided buildings should have adequate openings around the top of the cribs so moisture laden air can escape. The installation of a slatted "A" frame on the floor of single cribs will help speed up the drying job and make it more satisfactory. Air is blown into the frame and moves up through the corn piled on top and around it. Where space permits, fans or crop driers may be located in the driveway of double cribs and the air blown directly into side bins as desired. Be sure that air passes through all of the corn.
The development of mechanical drying methods and pickers enable farmers to harvest corn earlier. This enables them to clear fields for early seeding of small grains or cover crops, reduces the chances of loss from insect pests and cuts down possible damage from fall storms. Artificial drying also gives the farmer control over pre-crop storage problems, thus helping him to by-pass soft corn worries.

Farm Scrap Iron and Steel Will Help Our Defense Effort

"Have you turned your farm scrap into cash? Move it out of the fields now. Take a load to town and sell it on your next trip. It is needed to make steel for the defense program. It is a vital material and must not be allowed to waste away."
Many farmers have responded to that appeal recently, says the Committee on Iron and Steel Scrap, American Iron and Steel Institute. Those farmers have made a little money and gained space in their fields. The scrap is being put to use instead of being abandoned to rust and ruin.
"Farms are one of the big sources of scrap," says the Committee. "Never have farmers had without a big supply of scrap, steel output."
Harvest your iron and steel scrap right away. Turn it into cash. Do your part to aid the defense program.

Old tools, wornout parts of tractors, trucks, cultivators and other implements; broken and discarded pieces of metal and other scrap should be taken to town and sold right away to the local scrap dealer. Every pound of scrap which comes back to steel mills helps to make two pounds of new steel, on the average.
If the scrap is unusually bulky, preventing its easy transportation by the farmer, the scrap dealer can be called or the local farm agent can be asked to work out an arrangement.
