

OWL LAFFS

—BY— A WISE OWL

We had quite a family dinner at our place on Sunday. Such a shining you never saw. And you know what it was for? My wife was celebrating the fifth anniversary of her thirty-eighth birthday.

Last week we told you what a budget was. A reader called up and says he has a better one. He says a budget is when the money runs out before the month does.

Two women in the bank were having quite a discussion on men. The one was pretty well burned up with her husband and after sounding off quite a row, she exclaimed: "I wish all the men in the world were laid end to end and that I had a steam roller."

And girls if you want to catch a husband, take by advice: Be pretty if you can, witty if you must, but agreeable if it kills you.

"So What?" Enck says: "A true patriot is the person who can whistle the Star Spangled Banner while he is making out his income tax."

A local lady went down to Jim Hockenberry's to sweat out a complaint against her hubby who was drunk.

"How do you know he was drunk?" asked the Stature. The lady explained: "Well, he shook the clothes tree and then started to feel around the floor for some apples. — Guess that's proof enough."

A local mother refers to her youngster, a few months old, as her little bawl and change. — Cute?

Not too long ago a Florin lady was asked to testify in a Court case. When the judge asked:

"Madam, do you understand the nature of an oath?" She answered: "Well, my husband is a not-to-good golfer and my son drives a second-hand flivver." — Well!

When the report cards were distributed not too long ago, this conversation took place in our neighborhood.

"Junior," asked his father sternly, "what is the meaning of this 35 on your department card?" "Well, father," said Junior, stalling for an explanation, "It might be the thermometer reading in our classroom. It's really been cold there all month, and teacher may have seen me shivering."

Bones of Contention.

There may be no skeletons in the administration's closet, but the Republicans are finding bones of contention.

It begins to appear now that prosperity is an affliction.

Dear Member, A few lines of thanks to show my appreciation for your gift and thoughtfulness. It sure is good to know the people back home remember you when you have been away for awhile. I surely enjoyed the candy. I never knew it could taste so good. I was more pleased with the motive behind the gift. I'm quite sure all the fellows feel the same.

Also my thanks for the Bulletin. It's good to know what's going on back at the home town. I hope I get to see some of you before long. Thanks again.

Sincerely,
Charlie Brooks

PS. I think you all are doing a swell job.
