

OWL LAFFS

A WISE OWL

Here's another week I can't keep my mind on my work, cause all I can think about is that big buck I have tied for the first day. I ordered an inch of snow, so they'll be easy to track.

Some day a tax return may contain only three questions:
How much money have you got?
Where is it?
How soon can you get it?

"I've decided on a name for the baby," said the young mother when her hubby visited her at the hospital. "We'll call her Euphrosyne."
The husband didn't care for the selection, but he was the soul of tact.

"Splendid," he said, cheerfully. The first girl I ever loved was called Euphrosyne.

A few moments later the wife announced: "I've changed my mind, we'll call her Elizabeth, after my mother."

When Joann Funk was asked what could be worse than a man without a country, she replies: "A country without a man."

Beasting of the big farms in Texas a native was heard saying: "We have some big farms down in Texas. I've seen a man start out in the spring and plow a straight furrow till fall. Then he harvested back. And that's not all. It's the usual thing to send young married couples out to milk the cows and their children bring the milk back."
Big farms are not all they have in Texas — big prevaricators also come from there.

Back at the fire house the other night one of the fellows complained that his wife was very unreasonable.

"What were you and your wife fighting about?" asked a brother fireman.

"Well, she was trying to drive a nail in the wall with a hairbrush and I said, You can't drive that nail with a brush. Now I ask you, is that any reason for her to get mad?"

"Is that all you said?" questioned his friend.

"Well," the fellow added, "I did ask her why she didn't use her head."

A salesman walked into the bar of a New York night club, saw a customer lying helpless on the floor, and pointing to him, said: "Give me some of that."

Speaking of salesman, I heard a Donegal St. woman complain that a salesman who had just been to her house talked faster than any man she ever heard in her life. But her husband had the answer. He explained:

"Why shouldn't he talk fast? His father was a tobacco auctioneer and his mother was a woman."

Songs that'll never make the Hit Parade:
"You're Too Bowlegged to Round Up the Cattle, Mother; You'll Never Get Your Calves Together."
"Mother, Please Don't Point Father At Me; He May Be Loaded Again."

"Since He Grew Too Tall For The Family Trailer, Mammy's Little Baby Needs Shortin' Bread."

Weekly Letter By Penna. State Game Commission

The duck hunters and the small game hunters have had some fun. Now it's the bear hunters turn. The 1951 bruin season opens at 7 a. m. Monday, November 19, and closes at 5 p. m. Saturday, November 24. Bears over one year old are legal game. Cubs are protected. An individual may take one bear this season; a hunting party of three or more is allowed 2 bears. The usual big game roster is required when 5 or more persons hunt together or in any way cooperate in hunting bears.

The new law permitting small game hunting with semi-automatic shotguns firing rifled slugs or pump shotguns firing rifled slugs or pump kin balls may be used. They may be loaded to capacity when used in big game hunting in the Keystone State.

Field reports show that the bear like their food, are widely distributed this year. A bear kill map of 20 years ago would appear quite different from that of 1950. Food conditions have changed over the years, causing bears to move into territory where they were not formerly found and distributing them more widely. As for years past, Pa. continues to rank among the leading bear states in the nation. The rugged, timbered northern counties hold most of these shaggy prizes.

This year, turkey hunting (excluding counties closed to such hunting) is allowed in bear season. This may produce a rash of "two gun" hunters — one firearm for bears and one for gobblers.

Often, gunners ask, "How can we tell whether a bear is over one year old or not?" A good answer is this: A legal bear is a large one. No true sportsman wants to take home a small trophy. Certainly he doesn't wish to kill a cub with its mother. There is no excuse for shooting a bear of questionable age.

There is another point to consider: The eyes often lie to an anxious hunter. What may at first glance look like a large bear may be only a cub. Beyond the question of legality there is this item of great importance what appears to be a partially concealed bear in the brush may be a hunter who is foolish enough not to wear a distinguishing color. A second look, a searching one, is important for both reasons.

Two State Game Protectors who work in or adjacent to Philadelphia report deer incidents that will probably amaze residents of the "big woods" counties of Penna.

Says William E. Shaver, North Wales: "My district adjoins Philadelphia. It is rather alarming to note the fair size deer herd there. During September, five deer — four nice bucks and one doe — were killed on highways in my district. It is rather common to see 5 or 6 of them together. In one area there are 27 deer."

Donald L. Croft, Horsham, reported in October: "Last month a doe deer decided to see the sights of the state's largest city. She started down along the East River Drive, 'bucked' too much traffic and took refuge in a cemetery near Nicetown Lane for the night. Later the doe headed for a less congested area."

Dogs and Horses too much for Deer Game Protector Harold E. Russell was recently called to a farm near Ickesburg, Perry County, where a fawn deer lay dead. The little fellow had been severely injured by dogs. The farmer's steers came to the fawn's rescue, driving the dogs away. Whereupon his two horses immediately trampled the deer to death.

Russell mused: "The deer would have had to be killed anyway, but it's difficult for me to understand why the horses should show such a dislike for the fawn."

This Turkey Was In An Orchard Not The Straw

Game Protector Clarence F. Walker, Beavertown, Snyder Co., relates this incident:

"My attention was called to a coincidence which involved turkey nests in the orchards of a local apple grower. This man located a gobbler's nest under the third tree of the third row of the apple trees in one of his orchards. He cautioned his workmen not to spray that tree to avoid disturbing the hatching hen. He told this incident to his father-in-law, who decided to visit the site to see the hen and her nest — under the third tree of the third row, just as he expected. The unusual angle of the story is that he was not in the apple orchard his son-in-law mentioned, but in another one owned by the same man."

Game Bird Season End

Pennsylvania hunters who have recently reviewed the information given on their hunting license certificate are advised: The season on Bobwhite quail, Hungarian partridges and ruffed grouse closes on Saturday, November 17. November 5 was the last day of the 1951 season on woodcocks and doves.

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

I am going today to get the jump on Uncle Harry—he waits until January to give Congress and us citizens his report on the "State of the Nation". I am skeptical about waiting on him—we may be in such a mess by that time that it will be like attempting to unscramble an omelet—and which is not easy.

I like this country, it don't please me to see it drift and toss, with no anchor—to take on the appearance of just another country—not the America of our grandpa and grandpa. With all our experimenting and devious and sweet plans and with Sambo in on every deal, you will not venture down on Main Street—unless you have not been around much and are still a sucker—and expect to find everybody pleased and happy. Nobody is particularly happy anymore. We have no more food in the ice box, than of yore—we have doubts about our future security when it is in hands other than our very own—we don't know what to think, or what is next.

So I say this, don't wait until January to hear Uncle Harry's alibi—get agitated and perturbed now. Your congressman and senator is home now—he will listen, if you talk turkey. Don't leave everything to me.
