SHORT STORY
Epicurean Error
By Isabelle Snyder

Laura Fenton viewed the rutted road dubiously. "Are you sure this is the road, Amy?" "Oh yes—third road on the left—just as you wrote it in the notebook when Mrs. Edwards told us about it... a wonderful country home that serves divine food. Hurry, I'm starved. And it sounds so divine!"

Laura turned the carefully-cared-for coupe into the narrow road, guiding it cautiously up the steep grade.

Amy giggled like a girl. "It's a good thing it isn't much farther, Laura, I'm starved!"

Laura smiled gently at the exaggerated speech of her slightly friend who refused to grow old, gracefully or otherwise. "I believe the food will be worth the long drive off our main route. Mrs. Edwards is most discriminating."

"There's the place," announced Amy coughing from the thick just. "Just look at all the cars in the yard—the food must be wonderful!"

Laura turned the coupe into the crowded farm yard and carefully selected an ample parking spot.

Amy pouted. "The food may be perfect but we'll have to wait ages to get in—just look at all those others waiting!" She bounced from the car like a child and stood impatiently while Laura fastidiously changed driving gloves for fresh white ones before leaving the car primly. "Goodness, Amy Bowen, straighten your hat," Laura scolded as they walked to the house. "It seems strange that they don't have a sign on the road or out front," she commented as they ascended the steps to the veranda where other people already waited.

They were greeted by an unsmiling woman in black. "Would you care to come inside or will you wait here on the porch?"

"Oh, outside, please," answered Amy warmly. "It's much too nice a day to stay inside."

Her enthusiasm apparently was not transmitted by her speech. In fact, Amy had the peculiar sensation that comes to one who has committed a grave social error.

The woman murmured something polite and turned away but Amy was not to be denied. "I'm Amy Bowen and this is my friend, Laura Fenton. We are school teachers from over in Ohio," she said.

The woman looked at them in a puzzled way, acknowledged the introductions briefly and changed her place.

"Well, really!" Amy said in disbelief.

just before turning to Laura to say in a whisper, "Where do you suppose they feed folks, Laura? I don't smell any food nor hear any dishes."

Laura answered quietly, "Don't fret so, Amy. There are so many flowers around that you couldn't smell food."

Amy squirmed around in her chair, peering curiously into the house. "Goodness," she said, "the place is banked with flowers."

"Oh," she gasped, turning an odd greenish white. "Laura, I'm going to be sick," she cried.

Laura moved quickly, grasping the smaller woman by the arm to help her to the car. As they passed the open door, Laura glanced inside, then stifled a cry with a white-gloved hand. Reality had arrived with abrupt suddenness.

Not till the two women were safely in the car and ready to turn onto the paved highway did either speak. Amy wailed, "Oh, Laura, that horrible place! We'll never live this down."

Laura stopped the car and looked at the directions in the notebook. "Third road on right," she read. She turned to her stricken companion. "Amy Bowen," she said sternly, "maybe this will teach you to read the directions as they are written and to follow them carefully. The idea of taking us to a funeral

"MY EXPERIENCE IS THAT DAIRY BARN VENTILATION IS A DEFINITE ASSET...IT PROVIDES EVEN MORE BENEFITS THAN I HAD HOPED FOR..."
SAYS NORTHUMBERLAND COUNTY DAIRYMAN

Above is part of the dairy herd of W. C. Ganger, R.D. #2, Watsonstown, Pa., with the ventilating fan on the far wall.

Of the fan, Dairyman Ganger says further, "I purchased my dairy barn ventilation fan to reduce the moisture in the barn, improve the health of my herd and to see if I couldn't increase our milk production.

"I have realized all of the above mentioned benefits plus a number of others, such as a much cleaner barn, much less odor, and for less deterioration of wiring, piping..."

More and more Central Eastern Pennsylvania dairymen are finding that properly controlled ventilation pays for itself in these many ways. Investigate these advantages for your own dairy operation. Ask your local farm equipment dealer about them today.

BE CAREFUL!
ONE OF TEN FIRES IS CAUSED BY
Faulty Electrical Wiring and Apparatus
The use of a fuse of larger amperage than that for which the circuit was designed destroys this protective feature. An overload of current may heat the wire to the point of starting a fire. Be sure your fuses are of correct amperage for your circuits—5 ampers usually are right, and don't tamper with this "safety valve."
A few common sense precautions:
1. Employ a skilled electrician to repair or extend wiring when this is necessary.
2. Buy electric appliances and cords bearing the seal or label of Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc.
3. Don't string wires under rugs, over hooks, or in any exposed place. Wear may make them dangerous.
