Well Kept Buildings

Add to Farm Value
New Materials Make
Repair Jobs Easy

The appearance and condition of its buildings will increase or decrease the value of any farm. But more than that, well-kept buildings are an indication of the farmer's efficiency and his standing in the community.

A number of new materials such as asbestos shingles or siding, masonite—a tempered hardboard, ply-board and others are durable and inexpensive materials which the farmer who is handy with tools can use to increase the value of his property.

The building in the top picture is a discredit to any farm, while the one below, a remodeled version of the one above, will add to the farm's value.

Perhaps the old building will serve in its sorry-looking way, but maybe a wind storm will flatten it and any hope of salvage. It's smarter to fix up the old place and prevent your investment.

If the framework has sagged, of course, it is a good policy to have the building straightened up before anything else is undertaken.

From there the farmer who is handy with tools could do the job of repairing.

Russia Speeds Up Farm

Program; On War Footing

The U.S. department of agriculture reports the Communist program for agriculture is being changed to put the Soviet Union on a wartime basis.

Students of the Soviet farm system report Russia's collective farms are being arbitrarily cut in two.
This means that instead of 252,000 farms, Russia will now have 123-000. The conclusion drawn from this move is that Russian farmers are being regimented more. One hundred thousand very big collective farms are easier to manage from Moscow than twice that many.

Some experts believe there will be more systematic delivery of established farm production quotas under the new plan. Meeting production quotas on Russian farms has always been a problem in the Soviet economy.

Electric Hoist

A new all-purpose electric hoist, designed to take the "back-breaking" strain out of lifting jobs on the farm, was put on the market recently.
The unit includes an electric motor, trolley, cable and the necessary hooks to fit any make of litter or feed carriers. It will travel on any size or type of track and negotiates curves without difficulty. Farmers who might be interested in the equipment should inquire at their local dealers. It is manufactured by the Filchbaugh company of York, Pa.
