EDITORIAL

The State Fish Commission claims it planted 1,400,000 fish in Pennsylvania streams. About a week after the opening of the trout season this year we will tell you the fishermen's side of the stocking. Fishermen should not forget that the authorities can't stock 'em already caught.

President Truman evidently saw the hand-writing on the wall and finally broke out into the open and informed the public that he is not a candidate for re-election.

Harry, that's one time you were smart. With the farmers, the bulk of the South, labor unions, etc. against you, there was absolutely no chance.

Present indications don't point to a free-for-all, either. If Ike says yes, he's your next president.

The reason taxes seem high is because they are high. Back in the year 1950 the average person paid $3.88 in Federal taxes, while the average per person today is $472 according to the U. S. News & World Report. It isn't the high cost of living, it's the high cost of government.

BILLION IS A LOT
You might get an idea of the hugeness of a billion if you realize that since the birth of Christ more than 1900 years ago, just slightly more than a billion minutes have elapsed. If you take a look at the President's proposals further, you will see that he wants to spend more dollars in the next fiscal year than there have been seconds between the birth of Christ and the present time.

Here's another illustration as to how the present administration does business. A storage depot was erected at Horsehead, N. Y. at a cost of nine million dollars. In 1947 it was declared surplus and sold by the War Assets Administration for $1,126,000 to a Representative from New York state. Shortly thereafter he sold it for $2,585,000. Don't forget that nine million was your tax money.

The Pathfinder, a magazine published by Farm Journal, Inc., at Philadelphia, brings out some interesting facts in a recent issue. It compares Pres. Truman's spending with the appetite of a young walrus. We quote:

"It would be fitting if the walrus' name were Harry instead of Herbert. The Government's voracious appetite for the taxpayers' earnings continues to grow like the walrus. In the last six years, our Federal Government has taken from us more in taxes than the sum total collected throughout the entire previous history of the United States. In 162 years, our taxes totaled $251 billion. In the last six years, the Government has taxed us to the tune of $262 billion.

Governments are not unlike walrus. The bigger they get, the more they eat, the more they want. It actually costs us more today in taxes to feed our Government than it costs us for the food on our tables.

There is no evidence indicating any change for the better. How long this reckless spending of your money will continue will be determined by the people themselves. The only thing that will bring a halt is public pressure. When the people become sufficiently angry at the incredible waste and speak up forcefully, the Administration must listen. Speed the day!"

SMALL SLICE
We hear a great deal about all the money business takes in the course of its operations. But we do not hear as much as we should about where that money goes.

The 1951 financial experience of the leading American oil companies is typical and significant—not only of the oil industry, but of enterprise in general.

During the year, the company had a total income of a little more than $1,559,000,000, which is a whole lot of money in anybody's book. Here's what happened to it.

Salaries and wages, materials and other general expenses took almost $1,180,900,000, and depreciation, depletion and amortization of properties accounted for better than $51,900,000.

Taxes had to be paid to the tune of about $130,500,000.

After all the costs were met, the company had some $148,700,000 left—less than 10 percent of its gross income. A trifle more than $15,000,000 of this was paid out in dividends to the people who own the company, who invested their savings in it, and who made its existence possible. The balance was retained in the business, when it will be used for expansion, improvements, and the other undertakings that are necessary if a company is to keep up with the parade in the competitive business world.

One interesting aspect of this is that the stockholders' share of the income was only about one-third the size of the tax collectors'. In typical modern industry, the owners get one of the smallest slices of the "pie."

ONE DAY'S MEAT
Today you and your fellow citizens will eat 60,000,000 pounds of meat. You'll do the same thing tomorrow and the next day and all the days of the year. That's enough meat to fill 15,000 two-ton trucks, and every 24 hours it disappears across America's dining tables.

You don't have to know anything about the meat industry to realize how big a job it has on its hands. Most of our meat is produced west of the Mississippi, while most of it is eaten east of that river. The meat industry has to see to it that the meat is moved in an orderly fashion from the far-flung centers of production to all the centers of consumption. It has to get it where we want it and when we want it—and in every one of its many forms.

The meat industry, all the way from the livestock growers through the packing house to the butcher shop, is a basic, essential enterprise. That it is highly efficient goes without saying—meat is a perishable commodity and waste can't be tolerated. And it serves us far more cheaply than most of us realize. As an example, the packing concerns commonly earn, as profit, only a fraction of a cent a pound on the meat they handle. That is one of the good results of competition—there are more than 4,000 packers in the country, all looking for business.

The meat industry's job is getting bigger all the time. Our population is increasing at the rate of about 2,500,000 a year. This is due to two developments—first, there has been a bumper crop of babies in each of the past ten years; second, more people are living longer. And practically everyone is a meat eater.

WILL INCREASE WAF SQUADRON OVERSEAS

Lancaster, Pa., March 28, 1952—The department of the Air Force announced today action is being taken to increase the assigned strength of Women's Air Force Squadrons overseas to a level comparable to WAF Squadrons in the zone of the interior. Approximately fifty WAF per month will be shipped from the major commands to overseas squadrons with the first shipments to be made in June. The requirement of one year of Military service prior to overseas assignment remains in effect.

The Air Force further announced the shortage of Flight Traffic Specialists and qualified women for stewardess training in the Military Air Transport Service remains. In order to fill vacancies a special 60-day screening project is now set up at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, for WAF in basic training who show aptitude in this field.

POISON BAIT FOR FOXES IS CAUSING TROUBLE

You all know about the poison bait laid for foxes. Down around Fishing Creek it appears a number of dogs got the bait and died, while in Bucks Co., a warrant was sworn out for the arrest of a game warden for putting out the poison bait. The outcome should be interesting.
