MASONS BACK TO WORK

Ninety brick-layers in the county went out on strike last week for a 25 cent wage increase. They were offered 10 cents and went back to work Monday.

New Test Speeds Control Of Human-Animal Health

Nationwide progress in the use of a milk test for bovine brucellosis is helping to speed control of a major animal-human health problem, the American Veterinary Medical Association reported.

Reports coming in from various parts of the country indicate that the test, called the milk ring test, is a valuable ally to the standard brucellosis blood test in locating infected milking herds, the association said.

Consumption of unpasteurized milk from brucellosis-infected cows and contact with infected farm animals annually results in thousands of human cases of brucellosis (undulant fever).

Brucellosis also is important from an economic standpoint because it costs the livestock industry about $100,000 a year through heavy loss of unborn animals, reproductive failures and lower milk production," the AVMA pointed out.

From where Old Hi lolls before the fireplace in his woodland cabin, mulling over new angles on angling for us to try out this year, it looks like we're headed for some big times with rod and reel. Our waters will be having fresh stocks of trout, bass, pike, and other species from both the hatcheries and nature herself, and there are prospects of making mighty good catches.

Maybe I've already got a bad case of "fishing fever" and can't wait to trick the trout into my net, but what fisherman isn't laid low by the same ailment? Long about now? It's a disease that saps us of the desire to do work of any kind, except tinker with our tackle until the moment when we can put it to use outdoors.

We send the wife and kids to the movies, then spread our rods, reels, lines, and lures all over the place and spend some time in the pleasant task of fixin' up the tackle for rough tussles ahead with gamy brook, brown, and rainbow trout in fast waters.

Man and Weather

Rain and other weather phenomena followed a definite seven-day cycle throughout most of the United States last year, according to evidence compiled by Dr. Irving Langmuir, "rain-making" Nobel Prize chemist. The seven-day cycle, which is reflected in the rainfall records of almost every state, and which holds enormous potential significance for the welfare of mankind, is believed by Dr. Langmuir to have resulted from weekly cloud-seeding conducted in New Mexico under his direction. Once every week since December, 1949, rain-making silver iodide nuclei have been introduced into the atmosphere at Albuquerque by Project Cirrus, sponsored jointly by the Army Signal Corps, the Air Force, and the Office of Naval Research. Now, with a year's data available, Dr. Langmuir has found that almost every state in the union "has experienced a certain degree of seven-day periodicity in its weather since the periodic seeding was begun." This means that, in a given locality, maximum rainfall tends to occur the same day every week. Furthermore, this periodicity applied to weather conditions other than rain.

Time and Water

Time and fresh water, both precious in combat, are being saved in Korea due to a new Army Signal Corps photo processing method. Use of the recently developed process, known as stabilization, cuts development and printing time to a minimum and saves about 3,000 gallons of water each day in a typical field photographic laboratory. The Army Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories perfected the system through which a stabilizing solution, thiourea, eliminates the necessity for washing. Processing methods, with a specially formulated Amidol developer, make processing ten times faster for films and twice as fast for prints without sacrificing photographic quality.

It sure seems great, fellows, to be back with you all again, from coast to coast and North to South. For the fourth season we'll get together for weekly gab-fests, and search for fish in far-flung places.

Old Man Winter is losing his grip, and soon our baits and lures will be cast into lakes and streams for the chance once more to play spirited fighters on light tackle. It's not a bit too early, you know, to begin getting ready for this kind of action. There's a lot of useful pre-season repair and practice work to be done. More about that later.

Speaking of the movies reminds me of something. Don't forget to get in touch with your nearest dealer who handles H-I tackle and have him book a date for showing the new colored movie Old Hi is in, called "Fishing With H-I Power, Glass Rods," with sound. Just get a bunch of your angling pals together, and arrange for a time to see this picture, free of charge, at your dealer's store, fish and game club hall, or local school.

You'll enjoy seeing what glass bait casting and fly rods can do with a battling bass or trout, and will be interested in having an actual look at how these rods are made. You get a sense of appreciation as to the real value of a fine glass rod, and why so many fishermen take much pride in owning them.

Well, pals, I'll have to reel in my line for the time being, but first I'd like to say that I hope to hear from you fellows again this year and meet a lot of new friends. A great many of you sent for copies of my free booklet last season—called "Fishing For The Millions." "Salt Water Sports Fishing," and "Pacific Coastal Fishing"—and anyone who doesn't have these illustrated books yet is invited to write for them. Just drop a post card to Old Hi, in care of this newspaper, and you'll get your copies pronto.

Don't forget, too, that if you have any questions on fish or fishing, just cast them to Old Hi and I'll be glad to give you the dope desired. See you here again next week.
