MEMORIAL DAY

Deeds of gallantry speak for themselves. They become highlights in history and live because they are tied in with our national enthusiasm for honor and integrity, pride in valor, the realized debt of gratitude we owe our nation's heroes.

Memorial Day was established by the Grand Army of the Republic and through the rank of Civil War veterans has passed, the Grand Army posts no longer active. World Wars in which later generations have died, has continued to keep fresh the remembrance of this holiday. Memorial Day is the soldier's own, for men who believed in a principle and died for it. Greater than the men however, is the thing they died to secure. That thing we call freedom. As we decorate the graves, place wreaths on monuments, gather to observe ceremonies in public, we are honoring the great and their battle cry of freedom. Today as we meet in tribute we are planning the building of a stronger military strength, naval supremacy, air power. We boast of what we have accomplished in past victories and expect to safeguard our nation against any future threat by making our force of arms formidable.

Though born of war, Memorial Day speaks for peace. The tribute we pay at this time, is but a gesture lacking in sincerity, if we do not at the same time dedicate ourselves to the cause of peace. We must offer all the facilities of this country to preserve the lives of our young, to protect them from such a sacrifice that we do not heedlessly mark new graves for decoration on other Memorial Days.

Mothers are the real pacifists. Not that they do not revere our national traditions, our heritage, nor respect the need of fighting to hold freedom. But mothers can't hand their beloved sons to the enemy, can't place a gun in their hands, without crying first for peace. Mothers are the chief mourners in the military cemeteries, the world needs men who study trade agreements, finance, economies, spheres of influence, to sit at the war council tables, but there is a place at the session for mothers, who know more of the fear and agony of war's demands. The way of the mother is often overcome by the demands of the monstrous mad war machine.

May we keep our Memorial Day in good faith, in unflinching devotion to its purpose—honor and principle. The dead were victorious if they gain for us universal peace.

In that part of the Constitution known as the "Bill of Rights", Article IV states, "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated x x x" . . . . and court saw fit to grant the steel industry an order voiding the industry's seizure.

TRUTHS vs. UNTRUTHS

Various deceptive stratagems are periodically used to delude the public as to the true size of the profits earned by industry—and what happens to them.

For instance, it is commonly claimed by labor leaders and others that business can grant major wage increases without raising the prices of its products, by taking them out of allegedly huge profits. Yet last year, according to Economic Intelligence, dividend payments were $9,590,000,000 while compensation to employees totaled $178,190,000,000—nearly 20 times as much. If every nickel of dividend payments had gone to employees, leaving the owners exactly nothing, wages could have been increased by an average of only 5 per cent.

Another malicious and basically dishonest technique is to cite the magnitude of industrial profits before taxes. Nothing could give a more false picture of actual conditions. At current rates, taxes take some 60 per cent of all corporation profits. And it takes aren't a basic and inescapable part of the cost of operating a business, nothing is. The money a company pays to the government cannot be used to build plants, pay wages or dividends, or anything else. It is gone forever.

Furthermore, the money left to the corporation after all bills are paid is not, as so many think, divided up among the shareholders. Since the last world war, more than 50 per cent of corporate profits after taxes has been spent on plant expansion, to create more production and to provide more jobs for workers.

These are facts—as against the untruths and half-truths disseminated by the enemies of free enterprise. The public should know them.

THE SECOND EDGE

The complications involved in the seizure of the steel industry go far beyond any statistical question of wages and profits, and arguments as to whether steel workers and steel makers are getting more or less than they should.

For one thing, if the philosophy underlying the seizure ever becomes reflected in the laws of the land, collective bargaining will be dead. As the head of one steel company put it, "The union, with nothing to lose, will refuse management's final and best offer, gambling on the chance that a strike at that point will force seizure and create new pressure on management. Conversely, management will hesitate to make offers, feeling that they will merely become the trading basis upon which government will build new proposals under threat of seizure."

Furthermore, he went on, "The impact of this seizure upon labor unions themselves cannot long escape the attention of the thoughtful worker. Each sword that cuts a foe has a second edge. Unions themselves can be seized. Their right to strike is obviously limited. Their records and funds can be confiscated, and their officers removed, with strangers put in their places who would do the government bidding. . . . If a government may seize plants to install a union shop, it may likewise seize to forbid the union shop."

Entirely aside from the debate over how high steel wages should be and how much the industry should charge for its products, one thing is certain. Free labor cannot continue to exist unless the freedom of enterprise continues to exist. These are two edges of the same sword. If the government can dictate to industry, it can—and will—dictate to labor.

Eternity Is Endless

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

Learning the business
from the
"Grunt" up

In telephone language, a "grunt" is a man who works with a long-handled shovel digging holes for telephone poles. Working as a "grunt" has been the starting point for many a key telephone man.

The fact that so many important telephone men start in basic jobs is testimony to the stability of telephone people. They have faith in their work so they stick to their jobs. Their dependability is good reason why American telephone service is the most reliable in the world.
