The Dutch Philosopher

(AS OVERHEARD BY JOHN BOYD)

Well, Mrs. Veiss. Come on in inside and set down once. I chust made some ice-tea and you're chust in time for some. And here's some cookies I got at the store a few days ago and they ought to be eaten. They ain't crisp like they should be, but in this weather a body can't—

I know—they get damp still. But then again, at our aitch a person likes them a little on the soft side. In fact, Mrs. Espenshate, sometimes I dunk them first although it don't look so good and gets the ice-tea all full of crumbs.

Well, as you say, at our aitch who cares. Besides I ain't going to risk breaking a tooth on hard cookies or pretzels, manners or no manners. What's the good of getting older if a body has to worry themselves about table manners all the time. And besides, these here women that get up the etiquette books is always chainchaining their minds anyway about what is vulgar and what is refined.

Yes, what was good manners when we was children is bad today and as Chake might say, wicey-wersy. I remember my father used always to drink his tea and coffee out of his saucer after he blowed on it good but a body would not dare to do that nowadays. Or to eat with his knife like they used to do. I can see my father yet loading up his knife with mashed potatoes and peas mixed together. My mother didn't worry about whether it was good manners or not but she was always afraid that he might cut his mouth and get blood poisoning—or something.

Yes, well, times has chainched. Some things is better and some is worse. What does Chake think about the Democrat convention, now that it is all over and a body can go to bed at a reasonable hour?

He don't say an awful lot, except that he believes that both parties has good men for president and vice-president and the main thing is what kind of men is hanging on to their coat-sleeves.

What does he mean, hanging on to their coat-sleeves? Oh, he means that a lot of poor stick politicians will get elected chust because they are on the same ticket with Stevenson or Eisenhower. Chake says when you vote for a straight ticket for Eisenhower or Stevenson everybody else on the ticket gets your vote automatically, even though you never heard of them and don't know but what they are out and out crooks still.

I see, Well, I guess that can't be helped. As of right now, Chorch says he is thinking of splitting up his ticket so's to vote for Eisenhower and for this Guy Bart for senator instead of Martin, Bart being a Democrat.

Well, whatever, we will chust have to wait and see how things turn out from now 'til election day. But the big trouble is that people don't like to wait any more for the future. Seems like there's more news in the papers about what the experts say is going to happen than what there is about what has already happened. Chake says now with tellyvision we can only see things while they is happening but no doubt the next generation will invent something that will show things before they happen.

How could that be? Don't ask me. No doubt he was chust choking. Well, whoever gets elected it will be a chainch from what it was which I believe is what everybody really wants. Even if the Democrats win things will be different in Washington. For a while anyway.

Yes, that they will. Stevenson would bring in a whole new bunch of men to advise him and maybe throw out some of the corruption chust like Eisenhower would do. A new broom is always better to sweep with, I always say.

Well, politics or no politics, I gotta get over home and start supper. I am going to make fried tomatoes now that you can get some good home-grown ones.

How do you fry your tomatoes? Mine never get good.

The old-fashioned way I guess. Do you want such a recipe?

No—chust tell me in a cheneral way.

Well, you slice a lot of tomatoes and cover them with flour. Then you fry a panfull 'til they is sort of burnt and put them aside on a platter. Then you pour a lot of milk into the pan and make a thick gravy and when it's done you pour the gravy over the tomatoes on the platter.

Ummm. It sounds good but it's too complicated for me. I guess mine will chust get stewed—or sliced raw maybe.

Yes well. To make something good always takes a little work. Well I got to go. Why don't you come along over and watch me fry my tomatoes?

Some other day I will when I got more time and besides I ain't got any tomatoes today anyway — and the stores is closed.

Well, I got to run. Come over. I will. Good bye.

Good bye.
