Community boundaries established for the purpose of carrying out Federal farm programs in Lancaster County have been re-designed to increase the number of Community Committees from 16 to 24. Landus G. Becker, chairman of the Lancaster County Committee announced Tuesday.

Farmers in the new 24 "community area" must choose three regular members and two alternates to serve on each Community Committee. They will also select a delegate and alternate to represent them when the County PMA Committee and chairman are elected this year.

The townships in this area have been assigned to "communities" as follows:
Community No. 1 - West Donegal; 2-Mount Joy; 3-East Donegal; 4-West Hempfield; 5-Rapho.

Under these designations, Mt. Joy township has been removed from the district which also has West Donegal township.

East Donegal and West Donegal, formerly together, will now be a separate district.

SHORT STORY

Dead Past

By R. H. WILKINSON

3-Minute Fiction

A MAN with a past is at a disadvantage with the world. Johnny Martin realized this now more than ever.

He felt once more in his inside coat pocket and then searched through all his other pockets. But the envelope containing the money that Fred Carson had given him to bring to the bank was gone.

For perhaps five minutes Johnny stood on the corner of Main and Hill streets trying to decide what to do. Fred Carson, despite the fact that he had never questioned Johnny about his past, would wonder when told that the money was lost.

Fred might look into his past. He'd be sure to find out about that six months in jail.

Six months ago Johnny had hit Hillside. He liked the town. Between it and the scene of his past life there were almost 2000 miles. He got a job as helper with Fred Carson, who ran a tree nursery.

Fred Carson was middle-aged and fat and kindly. He hadn't asked a single question, except what Johnny knew about trees.

Then there was June Strafford. She was probably more reason than any why Johnny liked Hillside and why he wanted to stay. He regretted now that he'd put off telling her about himself, about his past.

Too late now. She'd find out from Fred Carson or some one else, and then there'd be no use trying to make her understand. Only a half-hour ago he'd met her at the post-office and they'd talked of the picnic they'd planned for next Sunday. Sunday! By that time Johnny could be hundreds of miles away. It would be an easy thing to do. He could take a bus up to Avon, then hop a train.

For perhaps five minutes Johnny stood on the corner of Main and Hill streets trying to decide what to do.

Down the street Johnny saw the big blue-gray Avon bus coming toward him. He was so used to running away. Automatically he began to make his plans.

It flashed across his mind that maybe this was the cause of all his unhappiness—because he had always run away. Because he never had the courage to face a thing down, to live it down.

THE AVON bus came roaring up to the corner, its driver looking questioningly at Johnny. But Johnny shook his head, turned resolutely and headed back toward the nursery.

During the 15 minutes it took him to get there he decided what he was going to do. First of all he was going to tell about losing the money. Then before Fred Carson could do any investigating he was going to tell all about his past and the six months he'd spent in jail.

Fred was in the shop. Johnny stopped short at the look in his employer's eyes. There was something about Fred's expression that provoked apprehension.

"Look, Mr. Carson," Johnny said. "I lost that money. I thought it was in my inside pocket, but when I came to take it out the envelope was gone." Fred's expression hardened. "There's something else I wanted to tell you," Johnny rushed on. "It's about me. I should have told you long ago, but, well, I guess I didn't have the courage. I spent some time in jail once. I was a kid. For breaking and entering. I've been trying to live it down ever since, but it always seems to catch up with me. And now, if you don't want a jailbird working for you—"

Fred's face had undergone a change. The hardness disappeared. "So that's it? And me just fixin' to bowl you out for mailing that money instead of deliverin' it. I was in a mind to do it, too, on account of the frost getting a whole double row of seedlings last night. Why, shucks, the money got to the bank all right. Tom Davis called up and said I was crazy for sending loose bills through the mails thataway. I figured you musta met June Stafford some-where and mailed the envelope so you could talk to her."

Johnny gulped. "And now that you know about me—?"

"Know about you? Why, shucks, sonny, I've knowed since two days after you came to work for me. June knows, too. A feller come through here who used to know you back East. He talked a lot." Fred's blue eyes twinkled. "Now stop gapin' at me an' get to work. I'm in no mood to argue."

"Yes, sir," he managed to say. "You bet, Mr. Carson!"

Odd Creature

"A bachelor looks unsettled and funny and he always wants to be running around seeing things. He looks at a woman and then looks away and then looks back again, so she knows he is thinking about her. Bachelors are always strange and that's why women like them."—James Stephens.

Keter Torah

What is the "Keter Torah?" A decorative crown which is placed on the top of the Scroll of the Torah in Jewish synagogues. It is usually embellished with little bells, which are referred to in the Bible as a decoration of priestly attire, Stars of David, and the Ten Commandments.

Floors

Seventy per cent of floors in large cities were finished with shellac according to research by a consumers publication. Properly applied in thin coats on oak floors, shellac was given a minimum of six years to stay in excellent condition according to the survey.

Hot Lacquer Facilitates Finishing

In the hot-lacquer process, heat is used instead of volatile lacquer ingredients to make the lacquer thin enough to spray. The process is now being used in the automobile and furniture industries as well as many others.

YOUR HEALTH

From the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania and the Lancaster County Medical Society.

Are things moving around you or are you moving around things?

Which ever it is, either of these conditions can spell vertigo.

Scientifically, vertigo is defined as a subjective sensation of rotational or linear movement, or displacement of oneself in relation to environment, or displacement of external objects in relation to the individual.

People commonly call it dizziness, light-headedness, giddiness, faintness, unsteadiness, confusion, and spots before the eyes.

It is not easy for the average patient to clearly describe his symptoms and at times it is difficult for the physician to make accurate diagnosis, since the vertigo may be so mild as to be scarcely noticeable, or again so severe as to incapacitate the patient.

Among possible causes of vertigo are eye disturbance, brain abscess or tumor, conditions associated with high blood pressure or hardening of the arteries, and damage to the central nervous system.

Many cases of vertigo originate in the inner ear or labyrinth and are associated with ringing or buzzing in the ears and deafness.

There is also toxic vertigo due to disease, metabolic, drugs and mental disorder.

Complete physical examination is usually necessary before the physician can make a definite diagnosis as to the cause of trouble.

Treatment first controls the attack and then removes the cause.

Reassurance of the patient is important, for many who suffer from vertigo are fearful of the onset of cerebral hemorrhage or brain tumor.

There is no better way to boost your business than by local newspaper advertising.

Eternity

Dear reader — Jesus did not come into the world for an example. But to save us by his death on the cross.

Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes we are healed.

Turn Signals Can Cause Accidents

Check your turn signals!

Keystone Automobile Club offered that advice to all motorists yesterday following complaints from Club members concerning non-use and misuse of the signalling devices.

Many drivers use the wrong control when indicating intention of making a turn, the Club pointed out. Some flash the indicator for a left turn, then make a right turn. Others do the reverse. The confusion and danger caused by such carelessness are considerable and so obvious that they need not be commended upon.

Another large segment of motorists depends too much upon the turn signals, setting the right or left turn control on the steering column without positive knowledge that the signal lights are flashing at front and rear ends of the automobile. Light bulbs occasionally burn out and once in a while connecting wires become loosened.

Consequently, the careful motorist will check or have his car's lighting system checked at regular and frequent intervals to be always fairly certain that the turn signals, as well as all other lights on the vehicle, are operating perfectly.

Although the turn-signal controls on most cars return to the off position after a turn has been made, it was pointed out, some must be returned to that position manually and it is there again that a considerable number of motorists are lax; they overlook the fact that the left or right-turn signal is still blinking on and off and ride along that way for miles, leaving confusion compounded in their wake. Many truck drivers also have been similarly lax, it was emphasized.

Finally, Keystone declared, in daytime driving it is best to give visible arm and hand signals in addition to using the turn signal lights. That's being double safe.

Business Improving
OPS cited continued improvement in overall business conditions as evidence that price pressures are increasing. The agency said it will go "all out" to enforce existing price controls and hold down inflation.
