Weddings

DRESCHER — KEENER

Miss Betty Keener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton L.

Keener, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and John M. Drescher, son of

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Drescher, Mount Joy R1, were married

Saturday at 2 p. m. at Mechanic Grove Mennonite Church by Jacob Harnish.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Robert

Keener. Mrs. Ann Gingrich, sister of the bride, Harrison, Va.,

was matron of honor and Marie Keener, Refton, another sister, was bridesmaid.

James Drescher, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Daniel Hertzler, Ohio; Everett Metzler, Manheim; and Elvin Weber, Ephrata; Betty King, Harrisonburg, played the wedding music and the Living Hope Hour Girls

Trio sang.

A reception was held in the Refton Fire Hall and after a wedding trip to the New England States, the couple will reside in Harrisonburg. The bride is a graduate of Millersville

State Teachers College and the bridegroom is attending Eastern Mennonite College and teaching history in the High School department.

Oh, chust like always. Nothing but politics and disasters and such like. A body can be glad that we don't live in California these days where they have them earthquakes. That I wouldn't like.

Chorch says the other day it's a good thing we don't have them here or all these modern ranch houses would fall to pieces and kill all the people in them unless they was out driving or in at the movies.

Yes, I guess they is worse than thunder and lightning. You never know when they is coming like you do here when there is such an electrical storm. You wouldn't have time to get under the bed or into a closet like I do sometimes when it thunders real loud and close. I was always afraid of thunderstorms, when I was a little.

I ain't afraid of them—much—but I can't say I enjoy them.

They make a person feel so little and helpless like because you know you can't do anything about it. Chust set and hope for the best.

Yes, there's nothing a body can do about thunder-storms and earthquakes. Except go and live someplace where there ain't ever been any, like in the tropics or at the North Pole.

Yes, I guess there's always something to be afraid of no matter where at you live.

And if you are careless crossing streets here at home you are like to get hit by an auto.

The Dutch Philosopher

(AS OVERHEARD BY JOHN BOYD)

Well now, Mrs. Veiss Come on inside the house because today it is too cool and windy to set outside. When I got up this morning I actually thought there had been such a frost.

Yes, it was quite cold. Last night I thought burklers was in the house because I woke up and heard drawers being opened and shut and I finally decided to wake up Chake so's he could get his shotgun when he stubbed his toes against a chair leg and I knew who it was from the way he carried on. I says, what in the world are you a-doing swearing like that and he says, I am chust hunting for that gray blanket. Where at did you hide it this time, he says. So I got up and turned on the light and found it for him folded up at the foot of his bed. Whenever he can't find something right away he always says where did I hide it still.

Chorch says that too. He drops things wherever he is using them and then he says I come after him and pick them up and hide them. All I do is put them back in their right place. Well, what's new?

Oh, chust like always. Nothing but politics and disasters and such like. A body can be glad that we don't live in California these days where they have them earthquakes. That I wouldn't like.

Chorch says the other day it's a good thing we don't have them here or all these modern ranch houses would fall to pieces and kill all the people in them unless they was out driving or in at the movies.

Yes, I guess there's always something to be afraid of no matter where at you live. And if you are careless crossing streets here at home you are like to get hit by an auto.

So, what's the use of worrying about thunder-storms. I know there ain't no use but still and all, I am afraid of them and I guess I always will be. If I didn't have a bed to creep under I don't know what I would do sometimes. Like chust the other night, I was—

Yes, well. Let's chainch the subchect. What does Chake think about the political situation these days? Or is he like Chorch who says he is sick and tired reading about what Eisenhower and Truman and Stevenson is planning to do come Labor Day?

Well, he says he thinks Ike and Adlai is both going to have a hard time getting elected. He says maybe it would be a good thing to go back to the old days when the man that got the most votes was president and the next man was vice-president.

When was that? Oh, in the early days when Chorch Washington was elected. I kind of remember it when we was studying civics at high school.

Well now, you have a good memory. I don't remember hardly a thing I studied at high school. I would know something 'til I took an examination and then I would chust forget it—especially history. I remember once I could name all the presidents and when they went in and when they went out, but now I don't believe I could name five or six—like Chorch Washington and Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt and Harry Truman—and oh yes, Bencha-min Franklin.

Benjamin Franklin was never the president. Well, now that chust goes to show you how dumb I am. It would be the same with cheography and Latin and arithmetic and everything. I remember I studied Cherman for two years and if it wouldn't be for Pennsylvania Dutch I couldn't say as much as how much is that, if I went into a grocery store in Chermany.

They say still that in Chermany the people don't understand Pennsylvania Dutch. Well then I would be lost there for sure. And speaking of groceries reminds me that I ain't got a thing in the house for supper.

I ain't either. So let's quit talking and go to the store. That's a good idea. Come on—maybe together we can find something cheap for a chainch. And as Chake would say, for that we got a fat chance.
