SHOOT STORY

Incident At Valley Post

By TED SHIMER

OLD MAN BATES came out of the hills early that spring driven by an impulse to inspect his new grandson in the little crossroads settlement of Valley Post. As he drove up the rutted street, he noted several changes since his last visit in the fall and waived airily to old acquaintances, at the same time noticing a few empty seats made of packing cases in front of the blacksmith shop.

He duly visited his daughter whose husband was foreman at the saw mill and was impressed by his squalling, red-faced grandson. He guessed he expected much more, but maybe next year the little toddler could walk down to the village with him.

That afternoon Old Man Bates sat in his familiar seat of honor in front of Clancy's General Store and, after holding forth on the merits of his own "diggings" far up in the hills, listened to the news.

About three o'clock in the afternoon the village was set agog by the appearance of a low black sedan touring through its main street. Automobiles were not too common in Valley Post with an occasional ramshackle Ford or clattering tractor drawing acute interest. Old Man Bates was eaten with curiosity and concealed awe.

He sat perfectly still as the sedan drew to a purring stop in front of the bank. Its rear end was rattled and splashed as witness to the fearful roads leading through the wilderness of virgin timber to Valley Post. With engine purring and its exhaust making little white puffs in the cool spring air, it was a symbol of latent power.

TWO young men stepped from the car and one of them surveyed the bank with an expression of acute disgust on his dark features. Old Man Bates took an instant dislike to this one. The other one was a smiling, blond, young man in an impeccable gray suit. He smiled at Old Man Bates and said, "Hello, Pop, how'za about watching the horses?" Old Man Bates grinned toothlessly back at him and nodded.

Both men entered the bank and Old Man Bates squinted at the big, purring car with a child like curiosity. Finally he rose. Then with some finality as if having reached a great decision, he walked slowly to the car his hand clutched about a small object.

A moment later there rose a fusillade of shots, and Old Man Bates pushed further behind his potato barrel as the bank door slammed open. The dark young man stood there a moment surveying the street and scowling, a smoking pistol in his right hand and a small satchel in his left. He beckoned with the pistol and the blonde young man followed him slowly to the car. The dark man cursed and slid under the wheel of the car. He made several dett but futile movements on the dashboard and Old Man Bates heard the urgent whir of the starter. The car would not start. Down the street the Constable's office banged open and soon rifles and shotguns began to converge on the black sedan.

Old Man Bates joined the crowd of townsmen and worked his way to the rear of the car. Someone saw him stoop and retrieve an object from its rear end. A shout went up and soon men were pounding his slight form and shaking his hand. The Constable shouldered his way through and pulled the two young bandits behind him.

"What's all the hullabaloo about back here," he demanded about Old Man Bates's son-in-law put his arm around the slight shoulders.

"Pop here stopped yer bandits cold. Yes, sir, he struck a potato in the tail pipe of their car. 'Darned smart work I calls it.'"

Later when Old Man Bates was taken to his Daughter's house he dawkled his grandson on his knee. His son-in-law inquired, "Pop, where did you learn that plugging up a tail pipe would stop a gasoline engine?"

Old Man Bates returned the candid unblinking gaze of his grandson and replied, "I ain't as old and dumb as some folks think. 'Sides I saw no sense in all that steam escaping from that tailend—so I plugged her up!"

Over $2,000

Six Large Prizes
The large prizes will be awarded as follows: The person securing the largest number of votes in the entire contest will be given $1000 in cash. The person securing the second highest number of votes in the entire contest will receive $500 in cash and so forth down the line until all prizes are awarded. Those not numbered among the prize winners will receive the liberal commissions offered. This gives the more enterprising men and women (married or single) of the more ambitious type, who are willing to co-operate in this short, snappy contest, an opportunity that comes once in a lifetime.

Our Slogan
"Everyone A Winner"
One of the features of this unique contest is the fact that there will be no losers in the race as a commission of 20 per cent ($1 out of $5 collected) will be paid daily to all active participants, which, in itself, is an excellent business proposition.

Not a Lucky Drawing
This is most emphatically not a "lucky drawing" nor something for nothing" affair. Instead, it is a business proposition, pure and simple. Its object, very frankly, is to further expand our ever-increasing list of subscribers, quickly and effectively to advertise the outstanding qualities of the shopping area represented by the MT. Joy BULLETIN and lastly, to open way for our friends and readers to profit in a big way through whatever spare time (everybody's busy, of course, but we all have some spare time) they may have during the next few weeks. So, it is a plan that works both ways and to the ultimate good of all concerned.

Local Paper Easy To Sell
One of the easiest things to sell in these local areas at the present time is subscriptions to this well-received newspaper.

With the general shift of population in the past few years, however, and influx of new people to these great areas, there are literally hundreds of such folks who would be only too glad to become regular subscribers if only asked to do so. In view of these facts therefore we decided to use the novel but time-tested and-proven method to quickly place our newspaper in the hands of more readers each week and thereby widen the scope of usefulness in the communities.

Will such a costly subscription drive be profitable to the publisher of this newspaper? That is a question that will probably occur to all who read the big page announcement elsewhere in this issue. Yes, it will pay not in immediate dollars and cents, perhaps for the expense of this undertaking is very heavy, but it should be remembered that newspapers earn dividends in other ways by having complete coverage in their field.

During this drive hundreds of new subscribers will be added to our lists, which means an immediate enhancement to the potency of this newspaper as advertising medium—the principal source of revenue for all newspapers—besides extending their scope of influence. The prestige gained will be almost inestimable.

Only Six Weeks
This subscription contest will not be a long-drawn-out affair, but extends over a period of six weeks.

The first step towards your success is to clip the Entry Blank appearing in the big one-page announcement and the Free Vote coupon appearing elsewhere in this paper then using the "Flying Start" Coupon and the First Week Coupon, you are off to a head-start with a substantial number of votes to your credit toward winning the big prizes offered.

The contest department is located in the Bulletin office, 11 East Main Street, Mount Joy, and will be open daily from 9 till 5 including Saturdays. The telephone number is Mount Joy 3-9661. An inquiry will not obligate you in any way.

Self Centered
Milton Lukatch, Milwaukee ladies' wear manufacturer: "The little woman doesn't buy fancy lingerie to please you but herself. The husband doesn't notice his wife's lingerie in most cases, and she seldom has an opportunity to show it off to other women."

"INDOORS AND OUTDOORS IMPROVED LIGHTING HAS MADE OUR FARM WORK EASIER AND SAFER... INCREASED PRODUCTION..."

says Northumberland County farmer, William Welliver.

The farmer's day is a long one, at best, but it's a lot pleasanter when darkness never comes. And it needn't... with a few wisely placed electric lights.

Mr. Welliver knows from experience what improved lighting can do... and here's what he has to say: "I have realized many benefits... suffer less eyestrain... much safer working conditions... and prowlers, whether animal or human, just naturally shy away from well-lighted areas. Better lighting has helped increase production on my farm, too."

Farmer Welliver concludes that, "Variety of modern lamp construction makes it easy to choose the right lamp for each job indoors and outdoors."

Lighting can simplify and lighten your winter work load, too... at little cost! Ask your PP&L Farm Representative to help you plan it... or your local electrical farm appliance dealer. Do it now, before Winter's long nights arrive!
