Paint To Detect Plugs Fire plugs connected direct to 12 ft. lines and will be known as major plugs and will be painted a special color. Fire plugs connected directly to 8 ft. lines will be known as semi-major plugs. The tops of these will be painted same as the major plugs, but the bottom part will remain the present color. All old plugs will be painted the same color as before, this will tell the firemen, said Mr. Miller just what they are connecting to and can connect the large engines to the large plugs.

At the present time the location of the stand pipe is at stake, says Miller, modern location of a stand pipe is in the town and not a mile away, in case of a bad fire the water is close at hand, with the friction loss cut to a minimum. In installing a stand pipe the foundation is of great importance, Miller quoted, another is the height and width, so that it will not topple over if empty during a windstorm. If the highest point of town can not be used, then the standpipe must be anchored, which will cost considerable more money.

Mr. Miller stated people in most parts of town should see an improvement in the water flow, it flows faster, even tho there is but little extra pressure added to it. When the new standpipe is put into service the water will be boosted about 20 lbs., this added pressure will be added by a few lbs. a day until the maximum is obtained. All customers will be notified, said Mr. Miller.

The old reservoir will be drained and left intact to be used in an emergency.

In closing the interview Mr. Miller stated the old reservoirs are not modern enough for today, for the reason that water leaves the pumping station ready for human consumption and should not be open for anything to contaminate it, for good health depends much on the water we use and Mt. Joy is blessed with a good source of desirable water from the gravel hills.

Why, Chake thinks it's all right. But he says to me, you know how much money you have and it's up to you to get by with it. And I says, don't worry because I will probably have some left when I get back to Lititz. You know me, I says. Then he says he wouldn't worry about me if I was going alone by myself, but he says, with that—uh—

Go on, what did he call me? Oh, he didn't call you anything. He chust meant that I would spend more money if somebody like you was with me than I would if I was alone house to the reservoir which discharged the water in the top of the reservoir—today another 8 ft. pipe runs from the pumping station down the creek road in North Barbara Street to the alley at Union National Bank where it empties into a 12 foot pipe. This pipe runs west in alley to Fairview Street and crosses Main Street to Lumber, to Marietta Pike, to the new school house one and one fourth mile where two fire plugs are installed and in service.

In construction at present is a 12 ft. pipe starting from the 12 ft. pipe at corner of Marietta & Lumber, which will run to the Pinkerton Rd. and Columbia, it will be jointed with the four and six ft. mains already installed. An 8 ft. line will be laid from the Union National Bank, connecting to the present 12 ft. line. This line will be laid in the alley to Jacob and Main streets.

All new 12 and 8 ft. pipes are connected to the present piping system at most all intersections, installed in the modern way, such as, each new fire plug between the valve and the main has a gate valve. All the repairs required should a fire plug be broken is to close the valve and not a single customer is effected, said Mr. Miller. Also, in the modern way of testing small valves where the pipe line crosses the creek leaks can be detected in a few minutes by a small water meter.

Expense keeps us from installing these simple testing stations over the whole town, Mr. Miller said, as man holes are needed.

What did you say to that? I says, no, Chorch, I don't need any new clothes before we go, but of course if me and Mrs. Veiss should accidentally see some real bargains in the big New York stores it would be our bounden duty to take advantage of them, I says.

He says that's what he was afraid of. And then he says, for once he wouldn't think it would be such a bad thing for me not to do my duty, I had to laugh. Then I says serious like, don't worry, Chorch. Me and Mrs. Veiss are chust going for a few days and we are not going on such a shopping trip. In fact, we are so sick of shopping that we won't want to go into a store even to look. We are going to lay in bed in the mornings and have our breakfast carried up to us on a wagon and in the afternoon we are going to see them big movie palaces and in the evenings we are going to the theater—or maybe even to an opera if there is a good one. Well, he says, maybe a shopping trip would cost me less than what you two are planning to do, he says. Then he says, what does Chake Veiss think of all this galling around? So I said I would ask you.

Chevrolet Launches 1953 Drive

Maryanne Carney gamely faces the herculean task of filling out 8,000 newspaper advertising orders which will be used in the announcement of Chevrolet's widely discussed 1953 passenger cars. Actually, Maryanne will get plenty of help on the assignment, but her position among the stacks of insertion orders emphasizes the promotional power behind the event.

The Dutch Philosopher

(AS OVERHEARD BY JOHN BOYD)

Well hello, Mrs. Espenshate. Come on in and set down. I guess now with all the Christmas stuff over we can take a rest once before we get all excited about going to New York City after New Year's.

Yes, for a week we can chust relax. Chorch thinks we are crazy to go to New York. He says, what do you two old women want to go to New York for? There is too many people there already, he says. And besides, he says, I suppose you will want a whole new outfit of clothes right now when I am wondering how I will get all your Christmas presents paid for that you had charched, he says.

What did you say to that? I says, no, Chorch, I don't need any new clothes before we go, but of course if me and Mrs. Veiss should accidentally see some real bargains in the big New York stores it would be our bounden duty to take advantage of them, I says.
