SHORT STORY

Old Love
 By R. H. WILKINSON

"If you are losing the affection of the man you love, pretend indifference," confidently wrote one authority.

Helen laughed bitterly. That looked well in print. But how about a woman who had been married to a man for 10 years and loved him now even more than the day of their wedding? How about it when you try and try to make yourself interesting to your husband, knowing all the time that you're playing a losing game because grey streaks are showing in your hair and inevitable lines are appearing in your face?

From her bedroom window Helen could see beneath the trees that surrounded the lodge, down as far as the lake. And suddenly she stiffened. Roger was coming up the path, carrying a canoe paddle and laughing down at a slim girl by his side.

The lines about Helen's mouth hardened. The girl, she knew, was Sally Burton. She was staying at the lodge with her folks.

Watching the carefree progress of the couple coming up the path, she said aloud: "How can I stop it, before it's too late. How can I combat youth?" There wasn't any answer even in the story books to that one.

Five minutes later Roger came into the room. At 34 he had lost none of his good looks, nor his boyishness and eagerness of manner. "Hi there, kiddo! Say, look! We're planning a picnic up at Birch Island tonight. Two canoes of us are going. There'll be a moon and we'll cook steaks. How about it?"

Helen's blood froze. He acted almost as if he hoped she'd refuse, yet was resigned to having her with him.

"I'm sorry, Roger. I've a dreadful headache. You run along with the others and let me stay here and rest."

"Do you mind if I do go?" he said, "it's the sort of thing I like doing, you know."

"Of course not, darling. Now if you don't mind—I'd like to go to bed."

NOT until the sound of picnickers had died away around a bend in the lake did Helen give way to her emotions.

"He wasn't even concerned about my headache . . . He was thinking only of the chance to be alone with Sally Burton . . . Oh, what's the use?" What's the use of trying to cling to something you know you've lost?"

How long Helen lay there she had no way of knowing. She must have slept, for when she opened her eyes it was to have them blinded by lightning. Sharp, deafening thunder followed. Rain lashed against the building.

Terror seized her. Ever since she had been a child she had been afraid in electric storms. By now, even greater than this instinctive fear, was fear for Roger.

She slipped from bed and ran to the window. A flash of lightning showed her the lake in a wild turmoil. She thought of the two frail canoes that had left earlier in the evening. She thought of Roger and Sally Burton . . .

A sound at the door brought her head around sharply. The room was suddenly flooded with light.

"Roger!"

He stood just inside the door, dripping wet.

"Hi, kiddo."

"Roger—you didn't—not in this storm?"

He nodded. "The others are safe—at Bailey's camp. They decided not to risk the storm." He came toward her, placed a hand on either of her shoulders. "I—knew you were always afraid of thunder storms, and—and it was the first time you'd ever refused to go any place with me. It made me wonder."

Helen knew she was trembling. Even though she wanted she could not have stopped herself from asking the next question.

"And—what of Sally?"

He stared at her blankly, surprised, puzzled. How should I know? She wasn't with our bunch."

"Not with—?" Helen broke off abruptly, feeling suddenly very foolish. Then Roger's arms slipped about her, and the old familiar sense of security swept over her as he held her close.

"There's no answer to this," she whispered half to herself. "No answer at all—except real love."

Living From Heart

WHEN YOU are studying a foreign language for the first time, one of the big "humps" is learning the vocabulary. It's dull but necessary. You can know the rules of grammar down to the last footnote; you can pronounce the words "like a native;" but if you don't know what the words mean, you are sunk. All this is just as true in trying to understand the Bible as it is in understanding anything else.

"Heart" Means Many Things

The Bible word "heart" is one of those that can be easily misunderstood. It speaks often of the heart. "Out of it are the issues of life," says the Proverb (Prov. 4:23). "These people honor me with their lips, but their heart is far from me," says the prophet Isaiah. Jesus says that it is what comes from a man's heart that makes him unclean. What, exactly, does "heart" mean, in the Bible? It could mean a number of things that it does not mean.

It is seldom used, in the Bible, in the literal sense of the physical organ that pushes the blood around. No ancient peoples knew the true physiology of the heart. Also, the Bible writers seldom, if ever, use the word in our common figurative sense of emotion, or the emotional life. If we today say that a certain person's heart rules his head, we mean by that, that his intellect is not as strong as his feelings. A smart and unscrupulous lawyer, in addressing a jury, will (as he might say) "go for their hearts, not for their heads." That is, he expects them to be swayed by prejudice and emotion, not by the facts in the case. But this too is not the Bible meaning of "heart." Certainly it is never balanced off against the mind or the intellect.

Bible Meaning of "Heart"

Even in modern times, with all our passion for scientifically accurate terms, there is no one word which means just what this word "heart" means in the Bible. There the heart stands for the center of the personality as a whole. If we used such words as "core" or "root" or "mainspring" of life, we should be getting at the idea. It is not emotional, though it affects the emotions. It is not intellectual, though it lies back of thinking. It does not quite mean character, rather it means the taproot of character.

Let us try to illustrate it. Tell the same piece of news to several people—say the report of some accident or disaster, and see how they react. One will be quite indifferent, one will burst into tears, another will laugh, another will say, "Can't we do something to help?" Now what makes the difference? All have heard the same words, but the words have different effects. In Bible language, the reason is that they have different hearts. The inner makeup is something deeper than what the eyes see or the ears hear, it is deeper than the brain, it lies at the bottom of the feelings. When the Bible speaks of a person's heart, it is not speaking of the way he acts or talks or feels or thinks; it means the way the man is.

God Sees Through Paint

If there was one sort of person for whom Jesus had no use whatever, it was a hypocrite. A hypocrite is a person who has learned the fatal trick of short-circuiting his heart from his outward actions. The hypocrite turns a smile on and off as he would turn a water faucet, not because he feels like smiling or frowning; but because he thinks a smile is called for; he will say one thing and think another. His apparent emotions, language, actions, have no more relation to his real inner self than the actions of a clown in a circus. A clown can act very funny with his painted smile, though inwardly full of bitterness or grief. He acts comical because he is paid for it, not necessarily because he feels gay.

Jesus liked people who live from within, who have no short-circuit between what they are on the outside and what they are on the inside. He did not care much for a fig-tree which was really nothing but figs stuck on a thorn bush. This is why the Bible has so much to say about the heart. If God has a man's heart, he has the man.
