MR. TELL HODGE
poultry farm manager
says "Any poultryman who wants to keep his flock's egg production high during cold weather must use Water Warmers."

Mr. Hodge, who manages the Prescott Poultry Farm owned by Dr. Henry F. Prescott on R.D. 2, Pine Grove, speaks from 10 years experience with electric poultry water warmers. With a capacity of 3,000 laying hens, 1,000 broilers and 400 turkeys, a total of 15 water warmers tempers all the water for the entire flock throughout the winter months. And, continues Mr. Hodge, "even with controlled lighting and automatic electric feeders, the biggest factor in our high winter egg production is this plentiful supply of water at the right temperatures."

Does your flock's winter egg production fall way off because their water supply is too cold to drink? If it does, contact your PP&L Farm Representative today and let him explain the ease of operation and low cost of poultry water warmers for your needs. Call him at your nearest PP&L office!

Good Breakfast — Good Morning

Any teen-ager can tell you that a good breakfast and a good morning go hand in hand. Blessed with a hearty appetite he would tell you that a good breakfast starts off with cereal—either the ready-to-eat kind like 40% bran flakes which may be combined with fruit as shown here, or an appealing piping hot cereal such as wheat meal. In addition, milk and buttered toast belong in the breakfast picture; and you'll find that the younger set will be happy to take on waffles or pancakes, or bacon and eggs while they're at it! This is the sort of spread that's sure to see a youngster through a rugged morning and prevent that hollow-in-the-middle feeling toward lunch time.

Yes, your teen-ager will take off for school wide awake and raring to go when you serve up a breakfast such as the two suggested here. In the second menu, by the way, wheat meal shares in the making of some of the tastiest waffles that ever brightened up a breakfast table, and when you present cocoa—well, there's a meal that's bound to create plenty of energy for the morning's activities. Of course, the same good-breakfast principle holds true for you and Dad, too. And every time you serve a hearty breakfast to your household you can rest assured that you've helped start the day right for all the family.
