E. DAY RESSLER

The Dutch Philosopher
(AS OVERHEARD BY JOHN BOYD)

Well—come in, Mrs. Espenshate and set down. It is nice and warm today but I believe it is too cold to set down outside.
Yes, it's all right outside if a body works at something, but too chilly to set still.
And besides that, Chake ain't fetched the porch chairs down from off of the attic anyway. So chust set down out here in the kitchen and you can watch me make such a brown betty pudding for Chake's supper. By request, I am making it.
Brown betty pudding is one of Chorch's favorites too. He says it wonders him why restaurants don't make it still so he could have a dish of it now and then.
Why don't you make one yourself for him sometimes? It ain't hard to make.
Well, I will chust set here and watch you and maybe I will get the idea.
It's very easy. You take a baking dish like this here and grease it good with oleo—or butter, if you want to call it that. Then you put in a layer of stale bread cut into little squares and then a layer of sliced apples. Then you put pieces of butter all over the apples and some brown sugar and cinnamon. Then another layer of bread and apples and butter and so on 'til you get the dish full and put bread, butter and cinnamon on the top. Then you bake it in the oven.
It sounds easy enough. Ain't there such a sauce that goes with it?
Sure, you make a hard sauce out of powdered sugar and butter and put in some kind of liquor to flavor it. Rum is about the best if you have some in the house. I always make a lot of the sauce because Chake says the sauce is the best part. He says whenever he gets any brown betty in a restaurant there is either no sauce at all and you got to eat it so, or not enough. If you don't like the rum flavor you can use vanilla.
Well, it all sounds simple when you tell it, but you know me. I would never get it right even if you stood down over me and told me chust what to do. I chust ain't got the knack of cooking anything that is complicated. I remember I made such a bread pudding once out of a cook-book and Chake said it reminded him of his boyhood days on the farm.
Well, it was nice of him to say that.
No, it wasn't. Because when I asked him how it reminded him of the farm he said it looked chust like the stuff he used to carry out to pigs in such a bucket. Stale bread soaked in skim-milk.
My land! You must of done something wrong.
No doubt. But I never made a bread pudding again.
I never do either. Chake says it's about the worst dessert a body can make—even if it's good. Well, what's new?

Well, I have chust about decided that I can't keep up with the news these days. Nothing but fires and airplane crashes and auto accidents—and now a train wreck last week.
And robberies and murders and divorces and such like crimes.
And from now 'til Chune the second we will have the coronation all over the newspapers and magazines.
Now that I would like to see. It must be quite a sight with all them dukes and earls and such like with their wives dressed up in their fancy clothes and covered with chewsels. From what I have read so far it seems like only the nobility has a chance of getting into the church where Elizabeth will be crowned.
Maybe we will see it on the tellyvision.
Some of it anyway. Maybe chust the parade—or maybe chust hear it on the radio.
Well, at any rate we will get enough of it. I feel sorry for the queen in a way going through all that rigmarole. I read somewhere that it takes two and a half hours chust the church part. Two and a half hours of that and I would be such a nervous wreck.
I have heard that some of them nobles take sandwiches and coffee along with them because they have to get there early so's not to keep the queen waiting and stay 'til it's all over whether they want to or not.
I suppose her husband will get a front seat being such a duke.
Won't he be a prince or something or other after Elizabeth is crowned?
That I don't know. Maybe he will be like Queen Victoria's husband—a prince consort I believe they called him.
That could be, but I guess hardly anybody will take much notice of him whatever they call him.
No, that day he will be chust playing a second fiddle and that's for sure.
Well now I didn't know he was a musician at all.
That's chust an expression. I don't think he is talented that way like Harry Truman was on the piano. Playing second fiddle means that a body don't amount to much.
I see. Well, I believe the brown betty is about done. There!
It looks chust wonderful good. Make's a body's mouth water even without the sauce. Well, I got to get over home and get supper. And I know there's no stale bread and no cinnamon and no apples—and no rum—in the house, so Chorch won't get any pudding. Good bye now.
Good bye.

home improvement projects. At the Home Economics club meetings, there is a business meeting, a recreational period and time to work on the project chosen. Club leaders and extension workers are present to help the members. These meetings are held in the forenoon or afternoon with a limited number in the evening.
In addition to the activities within a 4-H club there are county wide activities in which 4-H club members from all over Lancaster County take a part.
Each year approximately 40 boys and girls from Lancaster County attend 4-H Club Week at the Pennsylvania State College.
4-H club work is designed to help our young folks become more efficient farmers and homemakers.
Working with the 4-H clubs in the community are 4-H local leaders. These are the folks in the community who are interested in the youth of Lancaster County. They work without financial pay. Their pay is to see the progress of the young folks and to know they have given a helping hand to someone.
All young folks interested in getting more information about 4-H clubs and club work should get in touch with the club leaders in their community, or C. E. Craver, Assn. County Agent or Miss Yvonne Cook Home Economist, 202 Post Office Bldg., Lancaster, Pa. Both Home Economics and Agricultural clubs are to be organized by May 1.
The Local 4-H Club leaders in your community are:
Agriculture: Mr. and Mrs. John Herr, Curvin Martin, Jr., Lewis Bixler, all of Mount Joy R1.
Home Economics: Mrs. John Musser, Miss Jane Roland, both of Mount Joy R1; Mrs. Earl Walters, Salunga; Mrs. Charles Fely, Maytown.
