BY A WISE OWL

A man called up the New York office of the FBI and reported that he had stolen a suitcase in Grand Central Station. "It's full of blueprints and other stuff that looks like secret military information," he said. "I've checked it in one of the public lockers and I'm mailing you the key. I may be a thief but I'm a loyal American thief. — How about that!"

Farmer: Now 'tis the silo.
City Girl: Why you monster! Make those poor cows climb a ladder so they can eat their dinner.

The man at the police clerk's desk wanted some help in serving a warrant. "What does he look like?" asked the clerk. "Does he have a mustache?"

"Don't know," was the answer.
"If he does, he keeps it shaved off."

A worried mother telephoned an army man: "My son writes in a letter that he is coming home with a haskmark. Is that serious?"

"Old Jim is the luckiest man on earth," commented one of his neighbors. "Insured his house — burned down to the ground in a month. Insured himself against accident — broke his arm in a week. Insured his life last week and you know, now he's dead!" — He really hit the jackpot.

A newly made widow called at the insurance company office for the money due her on her late husband's policy. The manager said, "I'm very sorry, madam, to hear of your loss."

"That's just like you men," she snapped. "Always sorry when a poor woman gets a chance to make a little money." — They're all alike.

One of our servicemen, who had just returned from Korea was asked if the mosquitoes were bad.

"Bad?" he asked. "Why, they look at your dog tags before they bite to see if they're getting the right blood type." — After all that, he still has a sense of humor.

Believe this one or not, it's true, and the certain secretary is from our midst — This secretary kept turning the pages of a dictionary until finally another office worker asked what she was trying to find.

"Bankruptcy," said the secretary.
"Well, why are you looking way back there?"

"I know how to spell bank," she retorted. "and now I'm looking for rumpy."

Two friends met in front of the Acme. One said: "I hear you're moving to a house back by the railroad tracks. Aren't you afraid the trains will keep you awake nights?"

"No," said the other. "The landlord said the trains wouldn't bother us after the first few nights, so we're going to stay at a friend's house uptown those nights."

Spring house cleaning brought this on . . . Our attic's filled, without a doubt. With things that we could do without. But I am sure I'll count to ten Before I clean it out again — (For yesterday I threw away Exactly what I need today!)

My wife told me she's an extremely careful auto driver. She says she never takes any chances when driving. She always drives in the safety zones. — Oh, my!

A local man was registering at a small hotel upstate and a bedbug crawled slowly across the page.

"Well," he said. "I've been bitten by all sorts of bugs in hotels, but it's the first time I ever saw a bug crawl down to see what room I'll be in."

My late uncle never trusted banks. He left his entire fortune in the form of five-cent deposit bottles.

When I asked a Florin mama how her little boy was doing in school, she replied: "I won't know until I get his report card interpreted. I gotta find out whether 'P' means 'putrid' or 'perfect'."

If a man has his nose broken in two places, he ought to keep it out of those places.

Different night clubs in New York had different atmospheres. One takes you to Algiers, another to Monte Carlo, still another to Havana, others just take you.

How'd you like that onion snow early Tuesday morning, or weren't you out of bed yet? She really snowed! I'll bet the trout fishermen were getting sick for fear it would last.

Editorially . . . They're At It Again!

Every year about this time we get whole piles of publicity matter concerning Clean-Up, Paint-Up Week, Etc. But as far as this section of Lancaster County is concerned, all of those solicitations don't amount to a pile of beans.

Why? Because here the women folks just don't need any urging when it comes around to the time they tear things up, pile the furniture in a corner and go into the far corners for any mere trace of dust. Yep, and right now they're at it again!

Nope these women of ours don't need any urging on Clean Up Week as far as the house itself is concerned. One thing it might be well to suggest is that those neat piles of old magazines, papers, etc., stored away in garages and attics are of little value as far as dollars and cents are concerned—but do constitute a real fire hazard.

Some Staff!

We don't pretend to know poetry. But whether what Simon Fickinger handed us the other day when he dropped into our Brain Emporium is poetry, or just what you might call it, is something we're going to leave entirely up to you. "Here's something which will brighten up that editorial column," Simon informed us. So, here 'tis: When the Lord made the shad, the devil was mad.

For it seemed such a feast of delight. So to poison the scheme, he jumped in the stream
And stuck in the bones out of spite.
When the strawberry red, first illumined its bed
The angels looked down and were glad;
But the devil, 'tis said, fairly pounded his head
For he'd used all his bones on the shad.

Grass Roots Sentiment

The American Press recently asked 500 of us weekly editors to answer a lot of questions on the subject of what the current Congress should do. At the time we answered our list of questions we wondered if, possibly, we might be out of step with a lot of the fellows whose jobs bring them so close to honest-to-goodness, down-to-earth grass-roots sentiment.

But, we now are informed by the American Press, most of us weekly editors have one-track minds. Most of us agreed "that Congress should get rid of laws rather than make new ones; that government should interfere as little as possible with the freedom of the people; and that government should not enter into competition with private business . . ."

Specific proposals on which the editors recommended a "NO" vote included new government power projects, government-backed rural telephone service, federal health insurance, increased government-sponsored public housing.

In other words, most weekly editors feel this country needs less government domination—and we'll bet the majority of rural Americans feel the same way about it!

Litterbugs

Now that the fishing season has started and the outdoor season is with us once again, it's time for us to get back of a campaign against the "Litterbugs" and "vandalbugs", as suggested by the Isaac Walton League of America.

We agree that the twin menace to Outdoor America has been well known for years but nobody has yet done enough about it. The litterbug, wherever he stops or travels by car, still leaves his trail of eggshells, watermelon rinds, worn-out Kleenex, beer cans, broken pop bottles, or even unmentionables. The vandalbug still is at large in great numbers. The hunting vandal still aims his rifle anywhere for fun, shoots holes in farmers' milk cans, makes signs unreadable, shatters power line insulators, and spreads wreckage across the country from broken windows to dead prize bulls. Other vandals still set forests on fire with a flip of a cigarette or with a deliberate match. Many families still go wild once they get out-of-doors. They cut down wild flowers and shrubs, and write initials happily on the walls of rest rooms and public grounds . . . The highways and roadsides have become the wastebaskets of the automobile users.
