Young Jay Barnhart had the roomful of diners unconsciously swaying and swaying in their seats with his "boggie-woogie" numbers on the piano. Joe Pro-pochek livened up the affair from the very start with his polkas on the accordion.
Oldtimers missed the Rev. Elmer Keiser, who is now in Bloomsburg, but the Rev. W. L. Koder was an excellent substitute.
George Broske, coach of the rifle team, was making every-one acquainted at his end of the table and a lively conversation ensued.
George Hauke, John Day, John Lichty and Charles Heaps were all duly honored and stood up and took their respective bows.
A humorous note was injected into the two-hour banquet when toastmaster Groff found himself in front of the microphone instead of behind it on numerous occasions. Some wit suggested he moved too fast for a standard mike and needed a walkie-talkie instead.
Real oldtime Oldtimers were introduced, among them being Joe Breneman, George Gilham, Charlie Cassel, Everet Mylin, Carol Stauffer and others.
A lump came up in some throats when "Doc" Garber was asked to take a bow. Many present well remember how they used to gather around in his drug store years ago and talk over plays and games. Doc stayed to the very end of the affair too. Congratulations from all to

The Dutch Philosopher
(AS OVERHEARD BY JOHN BOYD)

Well now, Mrs. Veiss! Come up on the porch and set down on our new gliding swing. Chorch chust bought it for a present to himself. He says he is sick and tired of setting down on regular porch chairs and wants something he can lay down on stretched out like.
Well now, it certainly is comfortable—as good as a bed still. Stretch yourself out on it like you was going to take a nap. See? Chorch says on such a hot night he will sleep on it out here on the porch.
How about mosquitoes and such like bucks?
That don't worry me because he will not stay out all night on it anyway. One good bite and he will be inside the house. He makes more of a fuss about one mosquito bite than as if he was bit by a rattle-snake.
I don't like them either. And the more a body scratches the worse they itches. They ain't as bad around here though as they are in some places like New Chersey. Over there along the ocean people can't set on their porches of a night unless they is all screened in.
I know. In Brooklyn it's bad too. I was there a week one summer with my son-in-law and some nights when the wind was in the wrong direction you could not walk a block without getting all bit up.
Well, people don't set on porches much nowadays like they used to. With this tellyvison they got to set inside and then too they all got cars to go places in. I remember when I was a girl every night all our family would get washed and dressed for the evening as we called it, and we would set on the front porch. When Chake would come my parents would go inside the house and leave us alone together. And there we would set until Chake would ask me if I wanted an ice cream soda and then we would walk to the drug store to get it.
And then you would walk around the town all evening no doubt 'til nine or ten o'clock.
Yes well. Them was the good old days. Nowadays the boys drive up in their fathers' cars and away they go without caring whether they get dressed up or not—or what time they get back.
Yes, today it's different. What is Chake doing with himself this nice warm afternoon?
He went fishing early this morning down on the Susquehanna River someplace where there is supposed to be some big fish. Maybe we will have fresh fish for supper tonight. I only hope they ain't catfish, because they are the dickens to get ready.
Well now, if Chorch caught a fish and didn't clean it himself he would certainly not get any for his supper. Cleaning a fish I chust won't do. Ugh—the smelly things!
Oh, they ain't so bad except catfish and eels. Them you got to skin because their skins is too tough to eat.
Ei, yi, yi! Eels I would never eat at all. They remind me of a snake still.
Eels is good to eat. Chake says when he was a boy his Uncle Choe used to take him along sometimes when he went out on the river at night to bob for them in a row boat.
What do you mean bob for them? That I never heard tell of.
Chake says you got a whole lot of worms and threaded them like on a fish-line and then wound them up like a ball. You didn't use no hooks. The eels grabbed hold of the worms and you pulled in the line 'til you come to the eels and then caught them in such a little net and throwed the eels into the bottom of the boat. Sometimes, he said, they would come home with a whole bucketful of eels.
I betcha no women went along on such a trip.
No—that would not of been sport for girls. Imachin being in a boat at night with eels wriggling all around a body's feet. Did you ever touch a live eel, Mrs. Espenshate?
Me? Heavens no! I wouldn't touch a dead one even with a ten-foot pole as the saying is.
Well, if you did you would know what it means when a person says something is as slippery as an eel. They is really slippery. When you catch one by mistake on a hook Chake says you got to put sand on your hands to hold it long enough to get it unhooked. In fact I believe some people chust cut the line off and throw the eels and the hook back into the river. But they are good to eat—that I know.
Well, I have lived this long without no eels and I guess I can get along without them the rest of the way. You're not going already are you? It's early yet.
I had best get over home before Chake gets back, chust in case it's catfish.
Well, good luck—which means no eels.
Thanks — good bye.
