realistic color before your eyes. But the real story is that of the people. Their ruined cities, bodies torn by the cruel fangs of war, families reduced to starvation diets, children sleeping in open culverts—these voice a cry your heart can never silence.

Yet above even all this, "Korea" tells a message of hope and faith. For in their great need, multitudes of the people have turned to the Gospel of Jesus Christ—finding a meaning in life which transcends their dire circumstances.

Every alert American should see "Korea". The doors of the auditorium opens at 7 p. m. Every seat is Free. You are invited.

WARNERS 50 YEARS OF PROGRESS

Early one morning 50 years ago, a teen age farm boy named Wallace Warner loaded a five gallon can of milk into the family buggy and started out on a milk route. That was the beginning of Warners Dairy. Throughout the years that followed, and until the younger generation was old enough to assume the responsibility of running the business, Mather and Dad Warner worked long and weary hours but always held fast to their faith in the future.

Today the business goes forward under the management of the founder's three sons, Earl, Jess and Don, and the entire dairy operation, from farms through every phase of milk handling and product manufacturing, to final delivery, is as sanitation perfect and exacting in quality control as human effort and science can make it.

Pictured here are: (1) Mother and Dad Warner, (2) the bright, tile milking parlor at Old Forge Farm, one of 100 suppliers of Warners milk, and, (3) an air view of Warners modern Dairyland—the wonderland of quality dairy products.
