Lowdown From Hickory Grove

What we are to do in this land of speed and hurry with the addled automobile drivers who figure it is smart to hit up to 30 so long as their rear vision mirror shows no official on their trail—that is the question. It is not just gawky teen-agers—it is smartly mamas and papas too, who speed—who cross the double lines on the pavement—who have no idea as to what is an arm signal—who put manners and courtesy on ice, once they step on the starter and take off.

We might slow down the speeding part, if we went back to 20 horsepower versus 150 horsepower engines. But the matter of manners and courtesy—out the window as now—will require stern means. One police officer per mile might cut the mustard. Even that is doubtful. And while on the patrolmen subject, of all folks who deserve the highest praise and the most liberal pay it is these men who try to so manage traffic that the fewest victims will be carted to the undertakers.

As a starter on highway safety, all budgets for police and patrolmen should be boosted—even if your town has to fire its barn dance director or even your 15,000 buck city manager that you hire so that the mayor will have more hand shaking time on his hands.

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA.

Motorist's speed of more than 60 miles an hour is registered by radar on the tape, and the car is identified by its license number written on the tape as evidence of the violation by the State police radar operator.

Radar Screen Catching Speeders On Jersey 'Pike

New Brunswick, N. J.—Don't look now, but if you're driving at more than 60 miles an hour on the New Jersey Turnpike the radar screen will catch you if you don't watch out.

The magic eye of radar, scanning the traffic from some unobtrusive position along this modern, super express highway, accurately records the speed of each approaching vehicle on a constantly changing graph.

When the marker goes above the legal 60 miles an hour, a state trooper, operating the radar, notes the license number of the car or truck and radios the information to troopers ahead who make the arrest.

Just to make the effectiveness of the radar even more precise, the location of these electronic speed cops varies with the traffic and is never the same. If by chance, a speeding driver should suddenly recognize the radar unit ahead, it would already be too late for him to slow down. Such is the precision of this newest adaptation of the radar principle to catching speeders.

This, plus a large detachment of State police, is given credit for a substantial decrease in the number of accidents during the first quarter of 1953 as compared to the already low accident record in the same three-month period last year.

Speeding and reckless driving, according to George F. Smith, vice-chairman of the Turnpike Authority, are the major causes of accidents on the Turnpike as on every other express highway. Threat of arrest for violations of safe driving regulations is the greatest curb to violators.
