Getting Bamboozled

In a town like ours, it is a natural thing to trust one another. And that is why it is so much more disgusting when, periodically, somebody comes in and fleeces local businessmen out of their hard-earned dollars.

Police of Lebanon County now are scouring the country for the fellow who some months ago, came here and sold ads right and left for a directory of the community which he promised to publish. On the surface, the project sounded like a mighty good one.

Quite a few businessmen were so impressed that they paid for their advertisements in advance. And for their trusting natures, they now suffer a loss.

As we see it, about the only way such things as this can be regulated is to ban all projects of this kind. And that, we fear, is a bit hard to bring about.

outside solicitation until a committee can examine the credentials of those sponsoring

Community Picnics

Back in the era before everybody owned an automobile and felt the urge to get somewhere else, no matter where, community picnics were big affairs. Much thought and effort went into the programs presented and everybody had a lot of pleasant memories as a result.

But — and this is just our own thought — we can visualize a return of the popularity of the community picnic. In fact we would get a big kick out of an extra good community outdoor program this year. With the highways so crammed every day of the week, more and more families are looking about for things to do at or near home, especially over the summer months.

A Real Period of Change

A short talk with Doc. Mylin convinces us that we folks here in the most fertile spot of the world, are in the midst of a real period of transition — in education, at least.

Sure we're in the midst of creating a larger school district and building more modern educational facilities than we ever had before, but a look at Dr. Mylin's county map will show you that the same thing is going on throughout the county.

As a result, communities such as ours in the next few years will spend millions and millions of dollars for buildings, right here in one county. We'll go into debt, but if that debt is spread out sufficiently, the load will not be felt unnecessarily. Yep, and it is not unfair that a future generation which likewise will use these new facilities, should help to pay for them.

It is our hope that the day will come, some time, when we will spend ten times as much for education — and ten times less for armaments. That's our hope although we never expect to see the day!

Assessments

One big bugaboo of the present day, is the matter of assessments. Quite often readers ask us why we don't make more fuss about inequalities in assessments. And invariably they end up with the admonition "but don't use my name, I'm not sticking my neck out."

Community after community (Columbia for example) has called attention to inequalities in assessments. In fact the legislature some years back recognized that the fixing of assessments should be placed on the state level as well as on more expert a basis than at present.

But so far the politicians have prevented any real progress in bringing about the needed changes. With local tax loads increasing, even doubling, however, the demand for an equalization of assessments on at least the county level is going to become more emphatic.

Making History

Although we had determined to say nothing about it, the fact of ex-President Harry Truman's visit to Washington (which he emphasized was as a private citizen) does have its historical significance.

For one thing, we understand this is the first time a former chief executive has returned to the Capital without being officially invited. For another, it was reported he came to help the committee that is raising that $1,750,000 for the Memorial Library on his Grand View, Mo., farm. So he is probably the first national figure to try to whip up enthusiasm for his own monument.

He did not call at the White House. The President did not have time, he said, to see "every Tom, Dick and Harry."

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

It's plenty tough getting back to work after vacation and this humidity doesn't help one bit. But the column must be filled so here tis Clayt Newcomer was having a difficult time up at the tobacco warehouse the other day. Couldn't find the hook he used in his work. After looking around for it without success, he asked Ira if he had seen it anywhere and Ira replied: "Sure, you got it in your hand." — — — — — You're slipping Clayt.

You know, few people would be in debt if they didn't spend what their friends THINK they make.

The other afternoon when it was so terrible hot an uptown lady sent her little girl to Sloans for cold cream. Shortly after the child returned with a quart of ice cream. Her mother started to scold and the child explained: "But, mother, I got the coldest cream they had."

Dumb Doris's sister dumber got a check back from the bank marked insufficient funds and she immediately went into a tirade on the poor management at the bank that would let it run out of money. After several minutes her sister explained that it meant her, not the bank.

Abe "Yankee" Mumma went fishing with a brand new set of regalia. Thirty-eight dollars worth of rod, reel and line. He threw in the line and laid the rod down on the boat for a minute. When he went to pick it up it had completely disappeared — some inhabitant of the water had grabbed the hook and took everything else along and no amount of searching, showed a trace of any of the equipment. — — — — — What a sad fish tale.

After seeing some of the miserable cases of sunburn I wonder what people mean spending money for vacations to come home and be so uncomfortable. Just doesn't make sense.

Ladies, please bear in mind, if a husband's words are sharp, maybe it's from trying to get them in edgewise.

A grumpy householder on Barbara Street was awakened at 3 a. m. by a drunk who was pounding insistently on the door. The sleepy man opened the bedroom window and shouted to the inebriate below, "Go away, you're trying to get into the wrong house!" "Oh, yeah?" called the happy fellow. "An' how do you know yer not lookin' outa the wrong winder?"

I was visiting in Florin last evening and the telephone rang just as the wife was giving her husband a terrific tongue lashing. He answered it and heard a voice ask: "What program were you just listening to?" "Are you kidding?" he replied savagely, and hung up. — — — — — Poor guy!

Went to visit a classmate of mine whom I hadn't seen in twenty years. She was always writing to me that her husband makes a living with his pen and I naturally expected to meet a famous writer. When I arrived at their farm she took me outdoors to meet him amidst a setting of hog pens. — — — — — What a let down.

Ivan Wolgemuth, up at Newcomer Motors look the trap off the water cooler, in an effort to repair it and carefully placed his hand over the bottom of the pipe to keep the water from spilling all over the place. — — — — — Then he emptied it in the basin that had the pipe disconnected. Result: Wet floor.

Here's a household hint that "W. F." passed on to us The way to test good whiskey is to pass electricity through a quart of the stuff. If the current causes a precipitation of lye, tin, arsenic, iron slag and alum, the whiskey is fair. If however, the liquor chases the current back to the generator, you've got good whiskey.

Heard this one out at the playground: Tommy: "I've got a new tongue twister for you to learn today, Jimmy." Jimmy: "I don't think I want to learn anymore tongue twisters. That tongue twister you taught me yesterday was also a mouth sooper."

That's all for this week. And in parting I just want to say "I'm saving my money. Some day it may be worth something." A WISE OWL
