Amid arguments and rain the locals came through with their second win in two nights by defeating second place Brunnerville 9-3. The rain halted the game at the end of the fourth inning.

The little Rams opened with a three-run outburst in the first inning. Harnish was safe on an error. After Watkins made out, Hostetter followed with a home run in deep left field for two runs. Miller was safe on another and after stealing second and third, he scored on Etzell's squeeze bunt that went for a hit.

Brunnerville failed to score in their turn at bat. Mount Joy scored four runs in the top of the second inning. After Halbleib made out, Marshall and Harnish hit safely. Watkins was safe on a fielder's choice. Hostetter walked. Miller again was safe on an error and Etzell came through with his second hit. All if this garnered four runs.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB

PICNIC TO DRAW 20,000
Since 1919 a Lancaster Automobile Club picnic has been held every year, except during the four years of World War II. This year's picnic, scheduled for Hershey Park on Thursday July 23, is the thirty-first of the series. Twenty-six of the outings, including the one this year, were at Hershey Park. Three were held at Carsonia Park, Reading, and two at Willow Grove Park.

In the years since 1919 the Club has grown steadily. Its membership on July 1 of this year was 39,169, the second largest AAA club in Pennsylvania.

Club officials estimate that this year's picnic will attract upwards of 20,000 from all parts of the county. The program includes afternoon and evening concerts by the Pottstown band and glee club, a concert in the morning by the Paradise township high school band, an exhibition by State Police trained dogs, stunts by musical clowns and a big free vaudeville show in the park band shell at night.

Siding a New House

IF YOU'RE planning to build a house, you have many things to consider. Among them are three factors which can spell the success or failure of your construction venture—foundation, framing and siding. Good materials and craftsmanship here are mighty important.

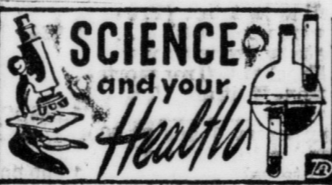

Since siding "shows," it is of more than passing interest to the owner. In siding, he wants such things as nice appearance, long life and as little maintenance as possible. A material that meets these qualifications recently was placed on the market as a package-sided. It is Masonite Siding, made of Tempered Preswood, an all-wood panel that has proved itself over a quarter-century under all weather conditions.

Masonite Siding comes in widths that are ideal for ranch style houses—12, 16 or 24 inches. These widths are inexpensive, and they add greatly to the appearance, used as lap siding with shadow strips. Of course, Masonite Siding can be used as panel siding, too, with attractive batten strips for a nice architectural effect.

Countless builders are turning to this siding because it is economical in first cost, in application and in upkeep. Its smoothness and high density make Masonite Siding an ideal base for paint. The absence of grain and knots gives it unusual paint-holding qualities—meaning that you have fewer repainting jobs.

NEW FRONTIER IN MEDICINE

by Science Features
One of the most exciting new frontiers in medicine is in the control and regulation of human metabolism. Metabolism is the functioning of various cells in the body to provide the energy necessary for life. Some scientists believe that in the understanding of these functions may lie the key to the conquest of many diseases.

The hormones, secretions of the internal ducts and glands, are the body's chemical messengers in the regulation and operation of metabolism—and life. Only in the past decade have scientists gathered any exact knowledge of how the hormones work.

Out of this knowledge has come a radically new concept of disease. Dr. Hans Selye, a Canadian physiologist, has offered a theory explaining between 30 and 40 diseases, including arthritis, rheumatic fever, and high blood pressure, as a result of an abnormal body reaction to what he calls stress. The hormones play the central role in this theory.

Whenever the body is subjected to a stress or strain—such as extreme cold, emotional shock or injury—there is always an outpouring of hormones from the adrenal glands. These hormones help the body compensate for the stress, but exactly how they do this is a mystery.

Dr. Selye thinks that after repeated stresses the body becomes exhausted and what he calls "an adaptive disease" results. Why this disease should take the form of high blood pressure in one person and arthritis in another is unknown. But if the theory proves to be correct it will explain a basic unity for seemingly different diseases, which in turn may lead to better treatments.

WRENS LIKE MOUNT JOY HOME

It looks as though wrens take a liking to Mrs. Geib, Mt. Joy R2, because this is the second year they have come to her place to build a nest.

Last year, at about this time, a wren chose the pocket of a pair of overalls for a home and stayed long enough to raise two families.

And now, again this year, a wren chose another pair of overalls hanging in the Geib yard for her home and began carrying sticks in one of the pockets. After the pocket evidently proved unsatisfactory, the wren began carrying sticks to the trouser legs. Of course they kept falling out the bottom. It was then that Mrs. Geib came to the rescue by tying the leg together with string.

And now the wren and her mate are busily filling their new home with sticks and strings.
