Confusing?
Mount Joy Residents are mighty confused today as they await with interest further developments in the now much-publicized Benedict case.

Was there a fix, or wasn't there? If there was one, who was responsible?

The official facts are that Lawrence A. Benedict, 1295 Meadowbrook Road, Lancaster, was arrested here July 14 by Officer Mike Good. On July 24 Benedict appeared before Robert K. Brown, justice of the peace, and paid a $25.00 fine on a reckless driving charge.

Question mark in the case is: What happened between July 14 and July 24? The claim has been made that a drunken-driving charge was originally placed and that it was changed to reckless driving. Officer Good and Squire Brown both deny having any part in lessening the charge.

District Attorney John W. Beyer has assigned his first assistant, William C. Storb, to get to the bottom of the matter.

The Bulletin, along with the citizens of Mount Joy, awaits with interest the results of District Attorney Beyer's action. BUT even more interested will all of us be in the position Mount Joy's borough council may take.

Ticket-fixing always has and always will be an affront to the basic principle of law enforcement. We think it vital to this community that the council determine whether or not there has been a "fix" and deal with it accordingly.

Group Of Five
To Investigate
Florin Project

A fact-finding committee of five members was elected Monday night at the Florin town meeting to gather all available information on the sewage problem which the community is facing.

The meeting, which was attended by approximately 100 people, was opened by C. Arthur Wolgemuth. He pointed out that the citizens committee which has been functioning the past several weeks in the circulating of a questionnaire to determine the will of the people had been operating under the handicap of not having the authority of the people of Florin.

Since the results of the survey had indicated the majority of the people favored the formation of a committee, he said, the meeting had been called for that purpose. Wolgemuth introduced Jack Owen, vocational agriculture teacher from Quarryville, as moderator of the evening.

After a report by Wolgemuth on the survey recently completed, a motion was put placing the names of 10 men in nomination for the committee. Owen then asked for other nominations. Although a number of citizens were nominated, most of them declined. Finally after further nominations, when it appeared no more would be forthcoming, a motion was put to close the nominations.

Names before the gathering then included: Max Raffensberger, Park Shetter, William Ressler, Elmer Forwood, Marlin Gish, Benjamin H. Staley, C. Arthur Wolgemuth, Glenn Y. Forney, R. Bruce Bernhard, John M. Hess Jr., all of whom were nominated in the first motion, and Frances Liggins, Fred Gehman and Joseph Boltzger, who were nominated from the floor.

To a question on how many of the 10 nominated as a group were property owners, Mr. Owen asked for information from Forwood, who was acting secretary. He reported seven of the 10 owned property.

To the accusation that the meeting was "cut and dried" Owen reminded the complainant that he had repeatedly asked for additional nominations and that the meeting had at all times been open to anyone who wished to speak.

Ballots were then distributed and Owen read the names that were to be added. After the voting had been completed, the tally clerks retired to the fire house to count the ballots, with Martin K. Miller reporting several minutes later that the following had been elected:

Max Raffensberger, Park Shetter, Elmer Forwood, Benjamin H. Staley and C. Arthur Wolgemuth.

After adjournment of the town meeting, the committee met briefly to organize. Wolgemuth was elected chairman, Staley, assistant chairman, Forwood, secretary, Shetter, assistant secretary, and Raffensberger, treasurer.
