COWS NEED FEED—When pastures become short because of dry weather, dairy cows need extra feed if they are to keep up milk production. Robert H. Olmstead, extension dairy specialist of the Pennsylvania State College, suggests feeding silage, hay, and some grain. This feeding also will keep the cows in good condition of flesh.

GET BULBS EARLY—Bulb catalogs will soon be coming in the mails. This is the time to plan for fall planting of bulbs, reminds Jno. Meszaros, Pennsylvania State College extension floriculturist. To be assured of good standard varieties, he suggests buying early from your reliable seeds-man or bulb dealer. Many local nurserymen have bulbs.

CREEP-FEED BEEF CALVES—Supplying grain to beef calves by means of a creep has proved profitable in most experimental tests, reports Thomas King, Penn State extension livestock specialist. The greater gains and increased selling price paid well for the grain fed to the calves before weaning, he says.

PROVIDE PULLET COMFORT—If pullets roost in the brooder house until they go into the laying house, you can provide greater comfort during hot weather by raising the roosts, say Penn State extension poultry specialists.

FERTILIZE STRAWBERRIES—An application of nitrate of soda now will encourage the formation of more and stronger flower buds on the new strawberry plants reminds Carl Bitner, Penn State extension fruit specialist.

Shrubby, Trees At Intersections Create Hazard

Motorists' complaints that shrubby and trees at street and highway intersections obstruct a driver's view and constitute serious traffic hazards have been received recently by Keystone Automobile Club.

"The club has had numerous complaints about intersection overgrowth at about this same period for quite a few years," said William S. Canning, Engineering Director. "Shrubby overgrows the side of the highway and weeds and grass grow high in fields at many points. Unfortunately, most of such growth is on private property. In some cases the properties have been planted with shrubby homes. In other instances, shrubby just grows wild.

"Keystone, from time to time has asked local authorities to do everything possible to remedy the situation. Such appeals often have convinced responsible homeowners of the inherent traffic danger. Very often, however, such requests have been ignored and in some cases indignantly refused.

"Where shrubby or trees constitute a hazard on the right of way of local streets or highways, we often have gotten quick results by appealing to township commissioners or other local officials.

"As an organization long and particularly devoted to the cause of highway safety, Keystone will continue its annual campaign to keep street and highway intersections clear of vision obstructing shrubby, trees and other growths."
