ROTARY VISITS AIRCRAFT MARINE

Members of the Rotary club were conducted on an interesting tour last week of Mount Joy's Aircraft Marine plant. Manager Paul Belser and his assistant, Willard Smith, were quite helpful in explaining the various functions of the company.

Mount Joy is fortunate that a plant of this calibre has located here. Chamber of Commerce, Borough Council and private citizens should be at all times endeavoring to interest other concerns in Mount Joy as "a good place in which to live and do business."

PICTURE PICTORIAL

The Mount Joy Bulletin was happy that things worked out last week so that we could give you full picture coverage of the Community Picnic.

To the Columbia News goes the credit for making this coverage possible. In cooperation with The Bulletin Ned Crist of the News staff spent the day at Hershey Park highlighting pictorially the events of the picnic.

The entire affair required excellent timing on the part of Mr. Crist. After spending the day at Hershey he returned to Columbia and had prints waiting for us the first thing Thursday morning. We picked out the pictures and Mr. Crist had cuts ready for us at 12:30 in time for publication, less than 24 hours after the event.

NEW FEATURE ADDED

With last week's issue, The Bulletin inaugurated a new feature—The Farmer's Market—a page on which will be published news and advertising of particular interest to farmers.

From week to week, The Bulletin staff hopes to expand this page to perform a real service to the farm market. Suggestions from readers will be appreciated.

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

Our thanks to some very nice people for liking our column and saying so. Just when we think we're getting very "corny" somebody says something nice to boost our morale. — Well, you're always digging holes, aren't you?

Hornberger, the well driller, got quite a bang out of being called a groundhog the other evening. He couldn't get the significance of the "moniker" until the spokesman exclaimed: "Well, you're always digging holes, aren't you?"

A young married lady from town had a shocking experience Saturday night. A female acquaintance of hers whom she met at work had fixed up a blind date for her. When date time arrived, at a rendezvous in York, the lady was most astounded to see her blind date turn out to be her husband. — They both immediately began to accuse each other of being no-good-two-timers:

A sweet little red head from Manheim feels sure her GI sweetheart has someone else on the string cause the last letter she got was on carbon copy. — By golly, could be!

There was a time when busbies were a stern necessity, but the girde makers found a way to get around it.

Heard an uptown lady uptown boast that she has her new husband eating right out of her hand. — I'll bet that saves a lot of dishwashing.

"Chaz" Fry says (and we're inclined to believe) "What some girls lack in brains, they make up in stupidity."

Did you know that stewed tomatoes were invented during the first World War? Seems a New Yorker had a Victory garden that he watered with whiskey and raised stewed tomatoes

Operator's Note: "Corn would have been very appropriate for that joke???"

That's almost as bad as the woman who ate dynamite hoping her hair would grow in bangs.

Joe says his mother-in-law lives just a stones' throw from him. He knows, 'cause he throws stones at her.
