Police Report

How to Skid-Proof Stairs

FALLS on stairs are a common cause of home accidents. There are several ways to prevent such mishaps. One is ample lighting. Another is keeping the steps clear of toys, bottle cartons, rubbers, umbrellas and other items.

A slippery surface is another cause of falls on steps. For smooth, unworn basement and attic steps, cover the slippery surface with some Masonite Tempered Presdwood one-quarter inch thick. Nail it down with the rough, screen side up, thus successfully skid-proofing the stairs. Other places for using this non-skid covering include the steps in a barn or other farm building, stairways to commercial or industrial lofts, steps to a child's slide, treads of a step-ladder, top of a stool used to stand on, floor in the home or farm workshop. When the screen surface of the hardboard wears thin, after years of use, it's an easy matter to replace the material.
