

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

I guess the less said about last Friday's "predicted snow flurries" the better. It sure didn't do much for the upstairs awning. It's "slightly" piced in many places, several pieces of the banister were found in the snow drifts and the metal chairs no longer resemble chairs. There's always one consolation, summer's over.

Did you ever stop to think how hard a man works to keep the wolf from his door. Then his daughter grows up and brings one right into the house.

Carl Germer says he must be getting older. This morning he saw a pretty girl drive past in a convertible. He can't remember whether the girl was a blonde or a brunette. But the car was an emerald green Cadillac. He's definitely aging.

This next bit of poetry is anonymous, but you should be able to guess the author. Breathes there a man who lay in bed, And never to himself hath said: "This is my own, my aching head, I wish I had stuck to milk instead."

There's a fool-proof invention on the market to make sick children take pills. This model plane—an exact replica of an Air Force bomber—has a bomb bay in which pills are stored. The youngsters holds the plane over his head, tilts his mouth skyward, yells "Bombs away" and then releases a bomb over the target, scoring a direct hit. The appeal is irresistible. Why can't I think of these things?

One of the high school students got quite a bang out of the choice of words the chemistry prof used today. His remark went like this— "If this chemical were to explode, I'd be blown through the roof—Now gather 'round close so you can follow."

They had quite a discussion up at Joe's barber shop last night. A fellow on the chair asked: "What causes baldness? I heard wearing a hat. "The way I understand it," answered Joe "the older you get the deeper the roots go. If the roots hit gray matter you get gray hair. If the roots hit a vacuum you get bald."

"In other words there's really nothing you barbers can do for baldness" the fellow remarked. Then Joe wise-cracked: "Well, I got a tonic here that if you've got loose dandruff, this tonic will tighten it up for you." That ended the conversation.

Two 1953 definitions— Collision: When two motorists go after the same pedestrian. Small town: Where the neighbors watch your wife for you.

Then there was the gunman who walked into a night club and said, politely: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, all those in favor of leaving this place alive will kindly hold up their hands."

It's not bad enough that teachers are underpaid. Now TV is making their job extra tough. Ninety percent of the kids refuse to answer a single question on the cuff. They want to know what's in it for them. They insist that if they answered the same questions on a TV program they'd get anything from a ranch type house to a vacation in Africa.

That's all for now. See you. A WISE OWL

"38th Parallel" Film To Be Shown Wed.

A showing of the sound color motion picture on Korea, "38 Parallel," will take place in a special rally on Wednesday, November 18, at the Calvary Bible Church located at New Haven and Henry Sts. beginning at 7:30 p. m.

The filming of "38 Parallel" was made in Korea by Dr. Bob Pierce, President of World Vision, Inc. of Portland, Oregon. During the time he spent in Korea, Pierce spoke at more than three hundred public meetings which were held in churches, high schools, colleges and open air assemblies. The crowds ranged up to fifty thousand persons in Taegu, Korea's second largest city. In Seoul the meetings averaged fifteen thousand for nine nights. This series of meetings conducted by Dr. Pierce was sponsored by Korean churches and has been acclaimed the largest in Korean history.

The film deals with the challenging of God's deadline in Korea. It reveals the mind and heart of the South Koreans before Communist hordes swept down upon them, their hunger for God, their simplicity of life and the tragedies which they had faced under Japanese occupation in World War II. The Korean way of life is vividly shown.

The film is forty minutes in length. The service is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Freight Cut Granted For Drought Victims

Eastern railroads have agreed to grant a 50 percent reduction on freight rates for the transportation of hay to drought areas.

Edgar V. Hill, chairman of the Traffic Executive Association - Eastern Railroads, said that the new rates went into effect Saturday, Nov. 7, from all points in Eastern territory to the government - designed drought areas.

He explained that this action has been taken in response to a recent request by the Agriculture. "While it first appeared that sufficient supplies would be available near the drought-stricken areas, it has since developed that surplus hay from many points in Eastern territory will be urgently needed in these areas," he added. "We are happy to cooperate with the Dept. of Agriculture in this relief operation."

Hill said that there is no accurate way to estimate the value of this service, because the volume of traffic and length of hauls is not known. "However," he added, "since it involves a reduction of 50 percent of current tariffs, it is fair to assume that it will represent a contribution of several hundred thousand dollars by the Eastern railroads."

The department of Agriculture estimates that perhaps a million tons of hay will be needed for the drought-relief program in the current fiscal year. Eastern states expected to supply hay include Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. In addition, some of the hay may have to be procured from Canada. Drought-stricken sections officially declared to be "emergency areas" by the government include all or parts of the following states: Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Kansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. In addition, the following states have applied for relief: South Carolina, Utah, West Virginia, Wyoming and Arizona.

Hill pointed out that this rate reduction is just one more milestone in the Eastern railroad's long history of service to agriculture, as well as to other segments of the economy. He noted
