Know Your State

A HEALTHY SIGN
It would be necessary to go back more than 30 years to match the estimated recent increase in population for Pennsylvania, reported by the State Planning Board, Pennsylvania Department of Commerce, (207-651 for the two years from April 1, 1950 to April 1, 1952). Not since the decade between 1910 and 1920 had the State increased at a rate as much as 1,000,000 a year. As a matter of record the entire ten year period from 1930 to 1940 showed a gain of only 268,830.

The two-year population increase estimated by the Board is not phenomel or occasioned by an abnormal influx of persons migrating to Pennsylvania. The increase means that the Commonwealth is able to keep most of its natural increase.

While some persons have moved from the State, about the same number formerly living elsewhere have lately made the State their residence. The net result is that the in and out migration has tended nearly to balance, permitting the natural increase to be added to the Commonwealth's population. This is a changed condition from that of the 1930's and early 1940's when the number of persons leaving Pennsylvania was far from matched by those moving into the State.

For a State to retain its natural increase is a healthy sign. People do not usually move from place to place because there is any joy in moving. The major cause of movements of population is the seeking of suitable employment. Since the residents are not moving from the State, it can be safely assumed that employment possibilities are keeping pace with population growth. This is a tribute to the industries of our Commonwealth and a sign that Pennsylvania's economy is sound and aggressive.
