Mr. Mumma's assistants and Miss Anna Lehman spoke on behalf of Mr. Schock's secretary.

Dr. Powers, educational consultant for the company, explained that the students are unique stock holders since the company is an educational institution. He said Mr. Schock contacted him in New York after one of his WOR radio broadcasts to tell him that he had in mind a plan. Already, the company had given one third of a million dollars in outright gifts to the high schools in the areas which sell SICO products.

Dr. Powers conducted a survey of the use of the given money and although it was being used for good purposes (a plan was devised whereby the money could be used for the betterment of everyone—giving high school students scholarships to enable them to become elementary teachers. The plan was for SICO to give $1,000 scholarships for a four-year term in college for prospective elementary teachers since the need in the educational field today is for elementary teachers.

Two years ago, the plan was raised to $1,200 per student and the students are to "tell the SICO story" to others so that the work that the company may be spread.

He also went on to say that in his travels and research, there is no other plan like this in the world. There is no company which turns its profits into scholarships. Dr. Powers said that the interviews help the students in three ways: to become a good teacher by getting the story across to others to promote the plan and to provide better human relationships.

Following the morning session, group pictures were taken and a luncheon was served. The afternoon was spent in round table discussion of ways to better the plan and in hearing testimonies of the sophomores who have had one year of telling the plan to the public.

Of the ninety-five students attending schools under the SICO plan, Miss Bonita Bigler, West Main St., Mount Joy, is a junior at Millersville State Teachers College and Miss Arlene Hubley, a 1953 graduate of East Donegal High School, is a freshman at Millersville.

There are forty-four others from Lancaster County attending Millersville State Teachers College. Two girls from Lower Dauphin County are attending M.S.T.C. and ten from Upper Dauphin County are attending Shippensburg State Teachers College. Nine from Cumberland County are taking courses at Shippensburg State Teachers College and seven from Berks County are attending West Chester State Teachers College; three from Lebanon County are studying at Millersville and eleven from York County are attending M.S.T.C.

Of the ninety-five scholarships offered by the SICO Company, 62 are attending the Lancaster County school at Millersville.

The Lowdown From Hickory Grove

I been tryin' to deduct the how-come of the question of why the more holders of B. A., B.S., and other degrees, that roam the land the more wars we have—the more confusion that envelops us.

To start the ball rolling I would venture that the big fly in the ointment might be in the Big School house. Its curriculum is designed to fetch in the greatest number. In psychology, social science, welfare and such, a simual desire to enjoy campus life will come close to getting the applicant past the entrance gate. You go in more or less devoid of what it is all about—you come out with a B.S. in social uplift with which you can prove nothing via a slip-stick—you just have an opinion. And such opinions is as liable to be as far from horse sense when
