TV Tips
TV Antenna Is Part of Your Set

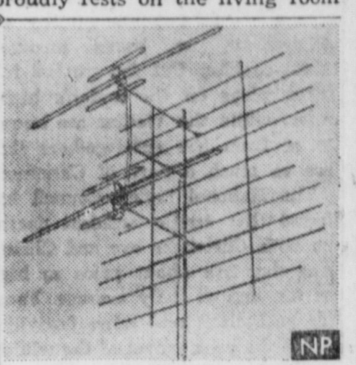

With television one of the most popular types of entertainment the TV set has become the object of a great deal of interest. Unfortunately, little or no attention is being paid to the antenna. In the family's mind, this is just something that goes on the roof after the all-important receiver proudly rests on the living room floor. Such a family is short-sighted in regarding the antenna slightly and is taking a risk of inferior reception.

They would do well to learn what engineers have known for years: that an average set with an excellent antenna will give better reception than an excellent set with a poor antenna. The authority for this statement is Harold Harris, Vice President in charge of Engineering and Research for the Channel Master Corporation, world's largest manufacturer of TV antennas.

Very few people realize that any television set, regardless of cost, is only as good as the antenna. No TV installation can possibly be better than the antenna because the antenna is the "eye and ear" of the TV set.

Good antenna installations can minimize and even eliminate the two most annoying disturbances to show up on the TV screen: "snow" and "ghosts." "Snow" shows up when the TV set receives a very weak signal from the telecasting station. A more powerful antenna reduces the amount of "snow" by bringing in a stronger signal.

"Ghosts" are double or triple images on the TV screen, and they occur when the transmitted signals have been reflected off another building, hill, water-tower, etc. Here again, the set-owner can reduce or eliminate "ghosts" by selecting an antenna which will only receive the signals directly from the station, while rejecting the reflected signals which cause the "ghosts."

One of the important factors in the selection of an antenna is distance. Viewers who live near the telecasting station are said to be in a "primary" area. Those dwelling in the suburbs usually find themselves in a "secondary" area. People far from a station are in a "fringe" area.

ing letter to all the children who wrote to him:
 Dear Children:
 I'm resting now at my home at the North Pole from my trip to Mount Joy Saturday so I thought I'd answer all your nice letters. By the way, my wife is fine and she is checking the letters you sent me and making a list of all the things that you want. The elves are busy finishing the toys for Christmas.

I'm sure that if you are all good children and listen to Mother and Dad, you will have a very Merry Christmas.

Love,
 Santa Claus
