Penna. Game Commission Weekly Letter

Though the fall and winter game seasons are past not all Pennsylvania hunters are putting their guns away. Many of them realize that plenty of sport awaits them, even in winter months.

Many sportsmen declare they get a greater thrill from successfully matching wits with crows or foxes than from bagging game species. Others enjoy the sport of great horned owl hunting. Removing predators from the wildlife scene causes a certain feeling of satisfaction to outdoorsmen. While predator hunts provide no meat for the table they do provide excitement and wholesome recreation.

In many areas these hardy off-season hunters carry out ear corn on their winter trips to leave feed for wild turkeys and other game.

Iron Horse Used as Hunting Vehicle

In Pennsylvania, about three years ago, a railroad engineer killed a deer illegally along the line's right-of-way and transported the animal on his "iron horse." He was apprehended and successfully prosecuted by a game protector.

Last fall, another railroad in the Quaker State tried a similar stunt and a like fate befell him. The illegal act is described by a wondering game protector, William A. Moyer, of Allentown who says: "There have been numerous cases of game shooting from autos and other vehicles, but last November I had something new—shooting from a train. Of course, that requires cooperation. In this case, the engineer stopped the train while his fireman shot and killed a rabbit. The train proceeded on its way after the fireman picked up his bunny."

Coal Miners Turn Deer Drivers

Are Pennsylvania deer becoming lair-minded? Not so long ago, one miraculously escaped autos and trucks in running through a mile-long Turnpike tunnel. Then another had itself a time in a Philadelphia subway. Now the Indiana County story by Game Protector Bruce Catherman, who tells: "At Kent Mine No. 8 of the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Co., late in November, something very unusual happened. As a loaded trip started into the mine tunnel the miners saw eyes shining in the semi-darkness. Getting closer, they distinguished a deer. The trip was stopped and the foreman worked his way around the animal and attempted to chase it toward the opening. As the deer ran it struck its head against the low crossbars and was knocked down. Driving it slowly, the men finally succeeded in shooting the deer from the mine, back into its natural environment."

Increase in Snowshoe Rabbit Hunting

Game protectors' reports on the recent eight-day snowshoe rabbit season tell that hunting pressure on Pennsylvania's varying hare has increased. There were more hunters afield and they spent more man days in pursuit of this game animal than usual in the northern counties, home territory of most of these "white rabbits." The field officers believe that tracking snow over much of the range induced more hunting. Despite the fact, snowshoe rabbits are not to be found in their onetime abundance in the Keystone State, the field reports indicate hunters had good luck.

Under The Basket

The local Rams defeated Manheim Boro in their initial start of the second round. The score was 60 to 41. Metzler, Klugh and Ashenfelter proved the "big guns" in the victory by scoring 23, 19 and 13 points respectively.

It was a ragged first half for the Rams as their offense failed to function. Using the fast break and good passing, the locals began to move during the second half. They outscored the Barons by 14 points during this period.

This game saw the entire varsity in action for the first time since the third game of the season.

The Junior Varsity lost a thriller in an over-time game. With the score 20-20 at the end of the regular period, Manheim scored five quick points while blanking the locals.
