Looking rather like a Wagnerian tenor hitting high C, this bull elephant seal objects strenuously to the cameraman intruding upon his privacy. He lives on Gualalupe Island off the coast of California and he is a feature player in the newest Moody Institute of Science film, "Prior Claim", sixth in the "Sermons from Science" series.

Science Movie Is Planned For Church

A queer little fellow who sports a multi-colored wardrobe, a built-in lasso tongue and ball-turret eyes stars in a new science film just released, proving that nature had it first. He is a chameleon, and you'll meet him in the Moody Institute of Science film, "Prior Claim," which will be shown at Calvary Bible Church, Henry and New Haven Sts., Mount Joy, March 30, at 7:30 P. M.
With refreshing originality and persistent curiosity the camera also ferrets out such intriguing facts of nature as the elephant seal which suffers from stomach ulcers, a snake equipped with its own "sniperscope" or thermal receptors, a diving spider which makes its own diving bell, a bird which flies like a helicopter.

"Prior Claim" points up such quaint and fascinating natural phenomena. But it is being discovered that many of nature's devices operate on the same principle as the great electronic advances of our time. Thus even in the invention and development which characterize this modern age, man does not have the prior claim. Wherever he may delve he finds that God was there first—He created it!
"Prior Claim," which runs about 50 minutes, is in full color and is accompanied by intelligent commentary. It is the sixth in the "Sermons from Science" series of gospel-science films produced by Dr. Irvin A. Moon of the Moody Institute of Science, Los Angeles, a branch of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. These films, with sound tracks in 14 languages, are shown all over the world.
