

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

Here's a little poem Gerald Miller sent us:
A penny isn't worth a cent,
It isn't worth a dime—
And yet you'll find it worth a dollar
If your meter's over-time.

And here's one Gertie sent us:
If Little Red Riding Hood lived today,
The modern girl would scorn her,
She only had to face one wolf,
Not one on every corner.

"Yes, women's fashions have changed during the past years," I asked one of the fellows over at the fire house: "Do you remember the wasp waists?"
"Remember them? He said: "That's when I got stung."

A new hired man out near Milton Grove was sleeping soundly when the farmer went to awaken him at four in the morning. "Come, get up," he called, "we're going to cut oats today."

"Are they wild oats?" asked the helper sleepily.
"No, of course not," replied the farmer.
"Then why do we have to sneak up on them in the dark?" inquired the hand.

Our boss told Ronnie Garlin, he heard he's been praying for a raise.
Ronnie: "Well - - -"
Boss: "Look here, I don't like the idea of you going over my head."

Fifth Grade teacher: "Sammy, where do we get sugar from?"
Sammy: "From our neighbor next door!"

Eat, drink, and be merry. If you have a food charge account, you have thirty days to digest your food.

A farmer from Conoy Twp. was driving home one evening from a nearby city, when he heard the fire siren and dutifully guided his horse and wagon over to the curb. After the engine whizzed by he clucked up his horse and started on again.
Then — it happened! — the ladder truck piled him into a heap.
"Didn't you hear the siren?" asked the cop as the farmer was scrambling from the wreckage.

Yes, and I let 'em go by and then along came that danged truck load of drunken painters."

West Ward woman had been inoculated and the next day she remained in bed to get over the bad effects. A caller arrived and the woman sent her small son down stairs to explain the situation.
"Mom's in bed," she said.
"In bed?"
"Yes. She was intoxicated yesterday and she has a bad headache."

Many married men insist that they are on speaking terms with their wives when all they do is listen.

A post office inspector was checking up on the post offices. In a nearby town he entered the post office at the rear of the store. Nothing suited him. He stormed at the grocer-post master. "You'll certainly hear about this when I send in my report."
The little old grocer-post master drew himself to his full height and marched into the post office. A few minutes later he handed the inspector a cigar box full of postal belongings.
"Here," he said, "take your old post office and get the heck out."
