BEWARE HOT SUN
By Science Features

In an over-anxious way, many people try to make up for the long, cold winter by giving themselves, too much exposure to the sun. Instead of a good tan, which can be gotten easily with gradual exposure, they end up with a bad burn. Recently scientists in Holland discovered that two different layers of skin burn under two different wave lengths of invisible ultra-violet rays. Generally, however, blondes burn faster than brunettes, children more quickly than adults and dry-skinned persons more easily than people with oily skin.

The average brunette can stand about two 15-to-20 minute stretches of strong sunlight the first day, double that the second day and gradual increases thereafter. Blondes and redheads should cut that schedule in half. Once tanned, you can stay out in the sun longer because one layer of skin thickens and the pigment develops, resulting in the "tan" color.

Don't be fooled on an overcast day, for clouds do not necessarily remove ultra-violet rays, and reflections from sand and water produce greater exposure.

All doctors agree that it's a good idea to use protective clothing and creams, lotions or oils. Many preparations contain compounds that filter out most of the ultra-violet rays and permit gradual tanning at the same time.

Vacation athletes who exercise under the hot sun may suffer sudden attack of heat exhaustion or the more serious sunstroke. To help prevent both conditions, avoid over-exertion and long exposure under the sun's rays. It is also necessary to replace the salt that the body loses in perspiration and to wear light, loose, protective clothing.

Southern Farmers Look Ahead . . . .
Use Room Air Conditioners for Eggs

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Southern farmers are thinking now about a problem which those above the Mason-Dixon Line will be pondering over a few months hence. It concerns the handling of summer eggs—a job that takes advance planning. It's most discouraging—and expensive—to produce high quality eggs

Room air conditioner cools eggs and farmer, too.

Other poultrymen prefer walk-in coolers, refrigeration systems or evaporative types of coolers. The latter often consist of square or rectangular boxes into which cool, moist air is forced by an electric fan. The "boxes" have openings in the top for egg baskets.

The popularity of room air conditioners prompted several Florida farmers to try out still another egg cooling idea. One large producer has a one-ton unit installed in his new combination egg room and farm office. The building, 16 x 24 feet in size, is constructed of cement blocks. It is well insulated on the sides and roof. During cooling operations, the unit is set to maintain a room temperature of between 55 and 60 degrees. Egg baskets are placed on a table in front of the unit and a small fan is located at one end of the table to provide added circulation of air. Eggs are held in storage at temperatures ranging from 65 to 70 degrees. The location of the unit in the same room as the farm office is an incentive for this farmer to do all of the "paper work" necessary to keep him well up with the leaders in his agricultural community.

Penna. Game Commission

The annual convention of the Pennsylvania Trappers Association was held at the S. B. Elliot State Forest Park, Clearfield County, on June 5th. Conferencees numbering about 125 came from all parts of the State.

Discussions on legislation affecting trapping, proposals for other protection, stocking, and fur seasons and bag limits occupied most of the convention time.

The Game Commission was represented by Roger M. Latham, chief of the Wildlife Research Division. He enumerated ways Pennsylvania trappers benefit from bounty payments, the small marsh program, state game lands, law enforcement, past research studies, and other activities of the Commission.

Lose A Champion

Outdoors people across Pennsylvania were saddened by the passing of Grover C. Lainer of Philadelphia on May 26th. The former State Supreme Court Justice fought against stream pollution for many years. His advocacy of wisdom in the use and preservation of all natural resources is widely known.

The hunters and fishermen of the state will long remember the onetime jurist with gratefulness for his championing of resource conservation, so vitally important to their outdoor pastimes.

Fur Sale Boosts Game Fund

The Game Commission's working capital is increased annually by the sale of wild animal skins seized or collected by the agency's personnel and sold to the highest bidder.

Recently, a record was completed showing the sale of confiscated furs and other pelts acquired by the Commission. It reveals $2,781.16 was realized as the highest price offered for the 2,123 skins collected.

Of these 1,705 were muskrats, 45 were beavers, 37 were mink, 2 were otters, and 31 were weasels. Less valuable pelts in the lot were, opossums, skunks, foxes and raccoons. Included, also, were 16 bear and 38 deer hides.

In April, hides of deer slain illegally last fall or winter, and others killed on highways or in the act of damaging crops, brought $4,818.10 to the Game Fund.

Lake To Be Created

A 550-acre lake will be created this summer on State Game Lands No. 213, in the Conneaut Marsh, Crawford County. The project is made possible only through the joint efforts of the Penna. Game Commission and the Penna. Dept. of Highways, as announced today by Herbert L. Buchanan, Game Commis-

TAXIDERMY EXAMINATION

TO BE GIVEN JUNE 23

An examination will be given on Wednesday, June 23rd, to persons seeking their first taxidermy license. The tests will be conducted in the Game Commission bounty office, located in Temporary Building No. 1, at Harrisburg. The time will be 10 a. m., daylight saving time.

In Pennsylvania, persons who wish to practice taxidermy are required to serve an apprenticeship and satisfy other requirements prior to being admitted to the examination. Only after passing the test are applicants eligible for a license to practice taxidermy in this state.

The examining board is made up of men highly qualified in the taxidermy field.
