Penna. Game Commission Weekly Letter

Field officers of the Game Commission met for four days, June 14-17, at the State Forest School, Mont Alto. Though division meetings are held periodically in various parts of the Commonwealth this in-service conference was the first of state wide scope in six years.

The accomplished objective was consideration of Pennsylvania's past wildlife management programs, evaluation of present ones and planning for the improvement of them in the future.

The Franklin County institution was placed at the disposal of the wildlife group by the Department of Forestry of The Pennsylvania State University. In addition to providing adequate facilities for such a meeting the beautiful grounds of the school added the final appropriate touch. On them stood magnificent trees that were saplings in the time of the early colonists.

The conference time was packed with panels and discourses on the many phases of wildlife management. Speakers and discussion leaders were drawn from state and federal agencies, as well as the Game Commission. Subjects such as game land utilization, wildlife research, education and information to the public, law enforcement, predator control, game propagation, and hunter casualty prevention occupied most of the time of the field officers and officials in attendance. Commission members were present throughout the entire period.

The exchange of information and ideas between field officers and the opportunity to discuss problems with Commission officials and administrators was of inestimable value to the personnel of the Game Commission. Knowledge gleaned from many sources at this conference will undoubtedly be returned in the form of better game administration in the future.

The conference ended with a pistol match in which game protectors demonstrated their progress with the hand gun. A trophy was presented to the northwest division, winner of the match by the donor, John C. He man, President of the Game Commission.

Future Farmers Plant Trees.
 Early in May, Game Protector John J. Troutman of Cambria County supervised planting of nearly 4000 seedlings. This job was done on state game lands by the Future Farmers of America Club of Replugh High School.

Troutman said, "This was a part of about 10,000 seedlings provided by the Game Commission these boys planted."

Crow Hunting Values
 Anyone who goes on his first crow hunting trip with a person experienced in ways of bringing the black rascals within shotgun range becomes interested in the preparations for the hunt. Quite often he is later amazed at the results of such trips because he knows how difficult it is to approach these wise and wary birds.

The newcomer to the game observes that the crow hunter carries a favorite caller or two and plenty of ammunition, and that he may take along live or mounted birds to use as decoys.

The crow hunter insists that the clothing worn blends with the surroundings, and is careful about choosing a location and a place of concealment, with enough opening to fire at the winged targets. If live or mounted decoys—great horned owls or crows, or both—are used they are strategically placed in openings. Everything possible is done to allay the canny bird's suspicion and stimulate his curiosity or animosity so he will come within gun range. His mortal enemy, the great horned owl, birds of his own feather or a call played upon to indicate distress and a need for help from other crows usually do the trick. Great success is achieved only by those who are expert in calling or decoying techniques.

Crow hunting offers a special brand of sport shooting and an intriguing contest of wits and skill that also keeps sportsmen's eyes sharp, year around, for game bird shooting in fall. Many outdoorsmen have become so fascinated by the off season sport they declare they would rather hunt old corvus than wild game. Control of this unprotected bird is desired by many sportsmen and agriculturists. They advocate keeping crows down to reasonable numbers as important to small game and song bird protection and to the reduction of farm crop losses.

Sportsmen Honor Game Protector

On June 3rd, another public servant learned that friendly, efficient service is appreciated. On that date Game Protector Leo E. Bushman, of Gettysburg was tendered a testimonial banquet at McSherrystown by the Adams County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs. The event was in recognition of the officer's retirement September 1st. Bushman has been a game protector over 34 years, most of that time in Adams County.

Dr. Logan J. Bennett, Executive Director of the Game Commission, delivered the principal address. He traced the honor guest's career in the wildlife field and told how Pennsylvania reached its prominence as a great game state. Game Protector Bushman was later tendered a plaque and several gifts in appreciation of his years of conscientious service in the sportsmen's interest.
