That Big Old-Fashioned Range . . . Just a Memory in Modern Kitchen

By IRA MILLER
 Farm Electrification Bureau

Remember mother's big black, coal range that occupied such a promi- nent place in the kitchen? To the boys and girls of our generation it meant cookies, pies and lots of other good things to eat. At Thanksgiving and Christmas, fat brown turkeys timers and appliance outlets. Some even are in color. Surface units have several different cooking heats. They're faster than ever, enabling you to get long-cooking operations started faster and to make short cooking jobs shorter. All units offer carefully measured and maintained heats to free the cook from pot watching and stirring chores.

LEARNING EARLY—4-H girls learn all about electric cooking in this model demonstration kitchen at Eastern States Exposition.

used to simmer in the dark recesses of the oven.

But nobody used to think about the cook. Truly, in those days, she did slave over a hot stove. In fact, she was a slave to it. Mother used to cook by sight, smell and some expert stirring. The "timer," if she needed one, was the wall clock.

Seems like a long time ago but actually it's only a few years back that women accepted a wedding ring and an antique kitchen at the same time. Today's electric ranges come equipped with about everything mother used to dream of having.

These modern high-speed ranges have super ovens, double ovens and standard ovens. You'll find them with deep well cookers or deep-fat fryers; with griddles, barbecue spits, lights, Ovens are insulated on all six sides to conserve heat, to keep your kitchen cooler, and to provide top efficiency and economy in baking and roasting. If your range has an automatic timer on the oven, it's no trick at all to cook whole meals while you busy yourself around the house or take in that long deferred PTA or commu- nity meeting. Just pop the meal into the oven, set the time for the hour you want the meal cooked—and be on your way. This "meal watcher" turns the heat on at the specified time; controls it during the cooking operation, and shuts it off at the proper moment. This—mother—is cooking at its best, and easiest. You may well ask—"what will they think of next?"
