

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

Up at Chet's last night a customer was served a highball. He looked at it, handed it back to "Sparky" and said: "I like it straight, strain the ginger ale out."

If you didn't see it — you certainly missed a treat. — Chief Neiss was sporting a new 4-day old jet black mustache, until Johnny Miller shamed him so badly that the Chief had it removed.

Two local gents were walking off the effects of a big party when they accidentally found themselves stumbling along the railroad tracks on Railroad St. After trudging along for some time, one commented: "This is the longest set of stairs I ever tried to climb."

"Sure is," complained his companion, "and why do you suppose they made the banisters so low?"

Up on Marietta Street a neighbor went over to a young newly-wed's house and found her in tears. "Why, what's wrong — — —" she asked.

"I made a cake and put it in the refrigerator and there isn't any frosting on it yet," she replied. — — — Poor thing!

Her sister, also a new bride, came up with this —

"Oh, Harry, do buy a mouse-trap this afternoon before you come home."

Harry exclaimed: "But I bought you three yesterday."

She explained: "I know, darling, but they're all full now."

Frank Shreve is serving a new drink called the Stock Market Special. Three of them and you've got a seat on the curb.

It's a waste of good energy for a man on vacation to worry about his problems — nobody is going to steal them.

Sad indeed was the plight of the insecticide salesman, who sold out his entire stock one evening, and when he returned home that night he found a big louse in his wife's closet.

Saw a Mt. Joy St. man this morning and remarked: "I hear that you were entertaining your neighbors last night."

"Yeah," he replied, "I had a fight with my wife on the front porch."

Earl Miller says road maps tell a motorist everything he wants to know except how to fold them up again.

As a plump little matron from Donegal Springs Road stepped off the scales at the Carlisle Fair, she complained to her husband, "Well, can you —"

"What's the matter Honey?"

"Are you a little overweight?"

"Oh, No," she retorted, "as she drew herself to her full height of five feet, one inch."

"I'm not overweight. According to these scales and that chart I am just five inches too short."

Personally, I think horsepower was a lot safer when only horses had it.

A local gent who hasn't been conducting himself to well lately went to York to a psychiatrist. He explained that his conscience was troubling him and the Doc said: "Ah, I see, you want me to help you strengthen your will power?"

"Heck, no," cried the gent, disgustedly, "I want you to try to weaken my conscience."

Driving up to the house to deliver the family's seventh baby, a local doctor almost ran over a duck.

"Is that your duck out front?"

Penna. Game Commission Weekly Letter

The 50-acre turkey hardening pen recently constructed in Monroe County is the fifth in Pennsylvania. This one supplies the needs of the Game Commission's two eastern divisions. One such enclosure is located in each of the other four divisions.

The purpose of the hardening pens is to allow young, farm-raised birds to become accustomed to living in the wild before being liberated. In the natural surroundings found in the hardening enclosure the turkeys learn to find their food and become man-shy so that when released they make truly wild targets for the hunter and are able to fend for themselves.

Young tom turkeys from the State Wild Turkey Farm are placed in the hardening pens, situated in wild forest country, in early August. They are released on suitable lands open to public hunting in October. When the turkeys, hatched in spring, are released in the pens they weigh approximately four pounds; when they are liberated in the wild about three months later they weigh 8 to 12 pounds. Grains and grasses planted in the enclosures attract insects, supplying important, natural food for wild turkeys.

Valuable Information in Leaflet With Hunting License

Every person who buys a Pennsylvania hunting license should receive a leaflet titled Digest of Hunting and Trapping Regulations. The leaflet is prepared for the information and guidance of people who take wildlife in Pennsylvania thru the use of gun, bow or trap.

The folder is a ready reference to questions that commonly concern sportsmen. It should be carefully read and carried with the hunting license for reference when the most-asked questions about hunting or trapping arise. The leaflet does not, of course, set forth all statutory provisions of the Game Law. Consulting the folder and the hunting license itself, or asking information of a game protector may prevent a fine or embarrassment, game authorities advise.

Game Lands Timber Sales Benefit Wildlife

In the Game Commission's fiscal year ending May 31, 1954 the sale of wood products from Game Lands totaled $51,827.73. Such sales were for saw timber, mine timber, paper and chemical wood, posts and mine props, and firewood.

Monies so received are deposited in the Game Fund. They will be of use in carrying on plantings and other operations in the interest of our wildlife. The principal value of these cuttings and thinnings, however results from openings made in the forest canopy. They allow sunlight to reach the forest floor and permit the growth of low vegetation, which is valuable as food and cover for wildlife.

Thus, in this management one renewable resource, timber, is harvested to the benefit of another, wildlife.

PALIO OF SIENA
What the Kentucky Derby means to us and Epsom Downs to Brits, the Palio of Siena is to Italians. For color, exuberance, and sheer excitement the Palio, oldest horse race in the world, is hard to beat.

Everybody reads newspapers but NOT everybody reads circular advertising left on their door step.

Traffic Toll Is Less Than 1953

Harrisburg — Despite a sharp increase in traffic fatalities in June the six months toll for 1954 is 24 less than the total for the corresponding period of '53, the Bureau of Highway Safety reported today.

Traffic fatalities in June 1954 were 68 rural, 59 urban and three on the Turnpike for a total of 130 against the June 1953 toll of 50 rural, 36 urban and eight on the Turnpike for a total of 94, an increase of 36 for June 1954 over June 1953.

For the first six months of this year there were 378 rural fatalities, 316 urban and 26 on the Turnpike for a total of 729 against the 378 rural, 321 urban and 45 on the Turnpike for a total of 744 in the corresponding period of 1953. Thus the first half of 1954 toll is 24 less than that of 1953.

There were 14 rural and 24 urban pedestrian fatalities in June 1954 for a total of 38 against five rural and 23 urban for a total of 28 in June 1953, an increase of ten for June '54.

In the first six months of this year there have been 80 rural and 186 urban deaths in the first half of 1953 for a total of 270, a decrease of 31 in pedestrian fatalities in the first half of this year over 1953.

Turnpike fatalities this year have run behind the 1953 toll in each of the first six months except January when there were seven, the same number as in January 1953. February had nine deaths last year against eight this year. March had five last against two this year. April had 11 last year against two this year. May had 5 last year against four this year, and June had eight last year against three this year. Thus the six months toll this year is 19 less than the total for the corresponding period of 1953.

CAUTION NEEDED TO KEEP CHILDREN SAFE

That active, vigorous bundle of untiring curiosity—the preschool child—needs protection from accidents.

The normal child at this age wants to touch and handle everything within reach. And he tries to put everything small enough into his mouth.

That's why it's important to keep matches, cigarettes, marbles, pins, money, and similar objects out of his reach. Store detergents, poisons, and cleaning fluids where he can't find them.

Place a gate at the top of the stairs or steps. Have a fenced place outdoors where he can play. Keep him away from ponds, open ditches, and automobile traffic until he's old enough to know how to protect himself.
