Sportsmen's Association To Show
Color Movies At Meeting Monday

Mount Joy Sportsmen's Association is inviting the public to its meeting next Monday night at the fire house at 8 p. m. Featured attraction will be colored films taken in Alaska and Canada by Capt. Robert M. Parker of Harrisburg.

Showing unusual shots of brown bear, moose and big horn sheep, the film took three years to make, and is considered one of the finest ever produced.

Also on the agenda in the next few days is the grand opening of Sportsmen's Field in Florin Sunday at 1 p. m.

In its 19th annual report, the association states that in the past year is raised and stocked 4,000 trout at the nurseries at Donegal. In addition, 10,000 finger-lings were started this year. Stocking activities also included 1,500 bass and 500 catfish. And for experimental purposes, the association got permission from state fish commission to stock 500 legal trout in Little Chickies creek.

The game committee reports: 145 rabbits trapped, 50 rabbits furnished by the state, 214 pheasants furnished by the state, 50 pheasants furnished by the association and 48 quail furnished by the state.

Because of the popularity of the fish contest, the association is repeating it again this year, with a large number of entries already reported.

Dues for the new year are now due.

Weekly Letter

The Game Commission reminds hunters that the current hunting license period expired Aug. 31. Beginning Sept. 1, and until the end of next August, a 1954 hunting license must be owned and worn in the lawful hunting or trapping of any wild birds or animals in this State.

The Department of Revenue advises 1954 hunting licenses have been shipped to all issuing agents. They should be available anywhere in the State as of Sept. 1.

Any person applying for the Special Archery License required for the October bow and arrow season on antlered deer must first own a 1954 Pennsylvania hunting license.

Archery license applications are obtainable from all hunting license issuing agents, but each application must be sent with the $2.00 fee to the Department of Revenue, at Harrisburg — the only agency empowered to issue such licenses.

Quail Population Increase

Noted
Many observers have commented on the considerable increase of quail this spring and summer over much of Penna.

The State's Bobwhite population is presently the highest since the severe winter of 1935-36, when all but a small percentage of these birds perished. Recent mild winters, an improved strain of quail and closure of the season last year to allow a build-up are reasons game authorities give for the heartening come-back of the bird. The following reports, received from game protectors last month, are typical:

Edgar M. Borger, Venango County: "The quail population is definitely on the increase in this area. The call of the Bobwhite can be heard now in many sections where it has not sounded for several years. I have seen coveys of young birds raised in the wild this year."

Homer Thrush, Cumberland County: "Numerous reports have been received from farmers relative to the increase of quail in my district. Several farmers reported these birds were on their farms for the first time in 18 years."

Leon P. Keiser, Superintendent of the State Wild Turkey Farm, in Lycoming County, tells that early this summer a workman found a pair of quail with 13 young in a hayfield on the farm. So far as is known no quail have been released with in 10 miles of that locality in many years.

Food And Cover Workmen

Sustenance For Game
A food-producing practice employed on State Game Lands in the interest of wildlife is here described by Albert J. Krieffski, a Pike County game protector, who says: "In the past two winters the Commission's food and cover corps in the Wayne and Pike County area has been engaged in the release and pruning of apple trees."

"Woods workers and hunters evidently three apple cores on State Game Lands No. 183, where trees growing from the seeds are in heavy timbers. Some of the apple trees there are very old, and new ones growing nearby were forty feet in height. They stretched up, competing for sunlight, slender as a bamboo pole and with no apparent chance for fruiting."

Our food and cover crew sawed off the tops, shaped the apple trees and opened the forest around them. While these trees are not pretty in form they are bearing such heavy crops it is necessary to prop up the limbs. The apples may not be top grade or the best varieties, but it's food in quantity wildlife needs in winter months."

The San Juan Rabbit

On February 10, this year, the Pennsylvania Dept. of Health issued a regulation forbidding the importation of any live wild rabbit, hare or rodent into the Commonwealth from areas known to be infected with dangerous transmissible diseases. This eliminated cottontail rabbit shipments from customary western state sources. However, the Department did not ban importation of a special breed of rabbit from the San Juan Islands, located in Puget Sound off the west coast of Washington. (A $1 fee is required with each importation permit request to the Department.) The reason was the Washington State Department of Health has had no report of bubonic plague or other serious diseases transmissible from rabbits to man from these islands in recent years.

In this connection a thought-provoking article titled THE SAN JUAN RABBIT appears in the September issue of Pennsylvania Game News. The author is Roger M. Latham, Chief of the Pennsylvania Game Commission's Research Division. The animal's history, its possibly undesirable features and the dangers of promiscuously introducing any wild species are thoroughly discussed. The article points out the destructive as well as the desirable traits of this large-size rabbit of European origin.

Latham closes his article with: "Research personnel are watching several of these San Juan releases closely. Within the next few years they hope to decide whether this new game animal should be encouraged or rigidly controlled. Let us hope this introduction will not turn out to be a biological blunder."

Boy Learns Trapping Lesson

Well
Daniel S. McPeck, Jr., the Delaware County Game Protector, says: "One of the proudest boys I have ever seen was Billy Weichell of Prospect Park. After Billy returned this summer from the Junior Conservation Camp he tried fox trapping methods taught him there by a Game Commission representative. When I came upon the boy he had just finished checking his 'trapline' — 2 traps. He proudly displayed 2 gray foxes he had caught. I believe it can safely be said that Billy is now a confirmed fox trapper."

Duck Rearing And Release Program Grows

The last of the 8141 mallard ducks reared on State Game Lands No. 213, Crawford County, in the spring and early summer of this year were released late in July. Except for 250 of these ducks, which were retained for 1955 egg production, all of the waterfowl were liberated in likely water areas over the Commonwealth.

In the four years the program has been in effect this was the largest number of ducks so reared and liberated in Pennsylvania. Last year Game Protectors set more than 7100 of the fowl free, the next highest number to the 1954 total.

All the released birds were leg banded. Everyone who kills or finds a banded duck is requested to write the Pennsylvania Game Commission, Harrisburg, or notify a local Game Protector. The report should contain: the band number, the sender's name and address, the location of the bird when killed or picked up, and the date. Each person who makes such a report is advised where and when the duck was released. This information is important to the Commission in its duck program. The whole project is important to the wildfowler.

Many of these ducks introduced into a marsh or pond area in Pennsylvania will return to the same locality the next spring to rear ducks in the wild and increase our native population.

Commission men also reared 46 goslings of Canada geese this year. Being old enough to "go it on their own" these birds were recently leg banded and released.

CHILD DRESSES EASILY WITH FRONT OPENINGS

Clothes that fasten in the front are easiest for a child to master, according to Margery L. Bessom, extension clothing specialist, the Penna. State University.

Fastening on the side are next easiest for the child to learn to use. All fastenings should be durable and of a size and shape that makes them easy to manage.

Flat, round buttons are easy to hold onto. Slide fasteners are easy to use especially on firm materials, such as corduroy or wool used in jackets. Use snaps or grippers only if they're large enough to fasten easily. Hooks and eyes and crocheted loops are too hard for young children to manage.
