Tuesday, Oct. 12, 9 a.m. - Town's End Meeting Room, located in the former Lititz Sales Barn on the eastern edge of Lititz; 1:30 p.m. - basement of U. B. Church in Silver Spring, along Marietta Pike; 8 p.m. - auditorium West Lampeter School at Lampeter. (This meeting held in conjunction with County Young Farmers' Assn.)

At each of these meetings, Mr. William Johnstone, Extension Economist from Penn State will discuss the cattle and the feed outlook. Also, Thomas King, Livestock Extension specialist, will discuss steer feeding and management.

Pole Posting Is Danger To Linemen

Pennsylvania Power & Light Company recently instituted a program to discourage the posting of placards on the Company's service poles. According to Mr. G. T. Storb, vice president of PP&L's Lancaster division, cooperation by all groups will help prevent linemen accidents and aid in the safer maintenance of dependable electric service in Central Eastern Pennsylvania.

The utility executive explained that nails, tacks or staples used in the posting of pole signs have caused numerous injuries to its linemen in past years. The injuries occur when a lineman's climbing spurs strike such metal objects and cut loose, and the man is either badly lacerated by the rusty nails and torn staples as he slips downward or, in more extreme cases, he actually tumbles from the pole to be seriously hurt.

Further evidence of the seriousness of the problem to electric company linemen as well as telephone workers and others is the fact that the state legislature last year passed P. L. Act No. 360 making posting of signs on service poles unlawful. However, not realizing the seriousness of the situations, some groups have continued postings despite the state lawmakers' action.

Realizing that people who fasten signs to service poles are simply unaware of the possible danger that may result, PP&L has recently made appeals to prevent further postings thru newspaper advertisements, school bulletin board posters and posters in its own office windows.
